Patrolman Langdon and Three Others to Face Coroner's Jury.

POLICEMAN FEARED, KIN OF VICTIM SAYS

A menacing hand last night made its sinister presence felt in the investigaton of the mysterious murder of Beulah Limerick when one of the slain girl's acquaintances found a death threat scrawled on a card in a mail box at her home.

Authorities attempted to trace this threat soon after they had decided to bring Patrolman Robert F. Langdon, who is held in connection with the murder, before a coroner's jury for its action.

Mary Ale, the recipient of the death threat, was an acquaintance of the slain girl and had met her at several dances. Late yesterday she found the death threat wrapped in a man's white handkerchief. It was crammed into a mail box in the front of her home at 1459 Ridge place southeast.

Girl to Be Questioned.

Capt. Edward J. Kelly, assistant chief of detectives, and Detective Sergt. John A. Flaherty were informed of the threat on the girl's life while they were questioning Richard Reed, a roomer at the Limerick home, who is held in the Eleventh Precinct in connection with the murder.

Kelly and Flaherty, head of the homicide squad, immediately went to the home of the girl. They declined to make public the text of the threat until they had investigated further.

Miss Ale told the police that she had known the Limerick girl for about two years, having met her at dances at Congress Heights. She professed to know none of the principals in the case with the exception of Robert Merchant, Alexandria radio entertainer, with whom she was acquainted.

She could give no reason why she should be singled out by the sender of the missive. Miss Ale is a housekeeper for George Dyer, a widower. She has lived at the Ridge place address for about a year, she said. She also said she was not a member of the Whoopee Club, of which Miss Limerick was secretary.

Inspector William S. Shelby yesterday conferred with Assistant United States Attorney William H. Collins and decided to bring Langdon before the jury.

With Langdon will be Vernon Limerick, brother of the slain girl; William E. Paddy, an acquaintance, and Reed.

Acting Coroner Joseph Rogers has not decided when the inquest will be held. This, he said, will be dependent upon a conference which he plans for today with Inspector Shelby. It was indicated that the coroner's review of the evidence will be held in the latter part of this week.

Says Girl Feared Langdon.

The girl had a mortal dread of Langdon, according to Mrs. Julia Bywaters, her sister.

On the day before the murder, Mrs. Bywaters told Capt. Edward J. Kelly, the girl, when asked by her mother when she intended to move from the house, said: "I wish to God it was today so that I could get away from that policeman."

Before Christmas, Mrs. Bywaters said, the girl had complained to her mother that Langdon entered the basement room of their house and when she repulsed his advances, Langdon had warned her that "he had once knocked a woman off."

Mrs. Bywaters' statements were made yesterday to Capt. Kelly during a questioning of an hour's duration in the homicide room at headquarters. These complaints, she said further, were only a few that the girl had made to her mother and prompted the decision by her to move, which was scheduled for the morning she was slain.

One Suspect Eliminated.

Activity in the puzzling murder was confined yesterday to an interrogation of Mrs. Bywaters, William Limerick, another brother, and Earl Reed, brother of the man held and a close friend of the family.

Detective Sergt. Thomas Sweeney yesterday eliminated Paul Loskaris, a Greek, who was being held in Bedford, Pa., as a suspect in the murder. Sweeney questioned the man for several hours and then sent a telegram to headquarters that the man knew nothing of the case.

Capt. Kelly was also investigating a report yesterday that Vernon Limerick had opposed the annulment proceedings brought by Beulah against her husband, Earl Aitcheson, which resulted in an annulment early in December.

Harry T. Whelan, Langdon's attorney, does not contemplate any moves at this time for the release of his client. "Langdon feels that the police department should be given ample

Dr. Wood Joins Expedition Against Geronimo After Dismissal From Boston Hospital

Finding Private Practice Slow, He Enlists as Surgeon in Army

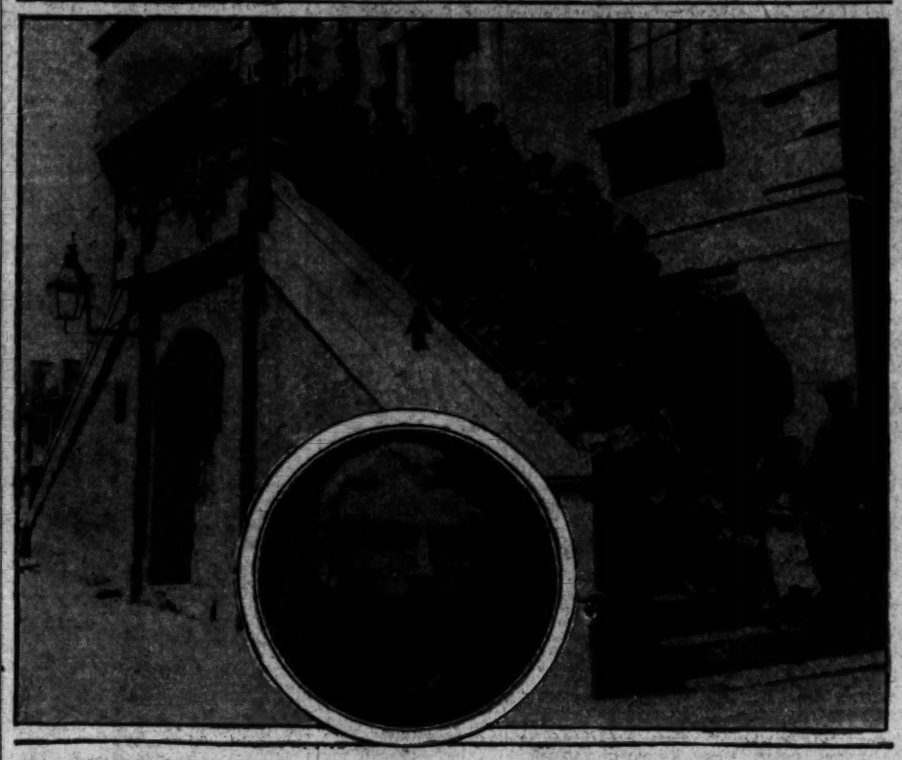
By HERMANN HAGEDORN.

CHAPTER III.

It was a rule of the Boston City Hospital, which Leonard Wood entered as a young doctor in the early '80s, that no interne should perform any operation whatsoever, make any incision of any kind, without specific permission of the superintendent, the senior house officer, or one of the visiting surgeons. The superintendent put the sharpest emphasis on this rule, recognizing that the reckless act of an inexperienced man might involve the hospital in a variety of difficulties which no institution dependent on political support dared face.

But the young surgeons, especially Wood, chafed under it. In the natural course of things, operations did not come often to interns and a house officer was lucky if he got a finger to amputate occasionally. Yet here was the interne's only opportunity to secure the experience which was absolutely essential if he were not to be a public menace when he went forth on his own.

Wood refused to admit that there was danger that the young surgeons, if left too much to their own devices, might kill a patient now and then. He felt that the superintendent in his rules was playing safe as an executive at the expense of the medical men he was supposed to educate, and said so with the intolerance not uncommon in bright young men who are intellectually feeling their oats. His life hitherto had moved amid circumstances in which self-reliance rather than tact was the essential element of survival. He had learned to act for himself, and he did so frequently in the hospital.



Leonard Wood, with his fellow classmates, about to be graduated from the Harvard Medical School in Cambridge in 1884. Inset—Dr. Wood about the time he rebelled against the red tape of the Boston City Hospital in 1884.

Internes were allowed to operate occasionally in emergency cases in the absence of the visiting surgeon, but only with the permission of the superintendent. Most of these emergency operations were for tracheotomy in cases of diphtheria, when the patient, generally a child, would be in danger of choking to death. It all came down to a definition of the word "emergency," which the senior house officer or the superintendent was supposed to provide.

Those gentlemen, however, were not always accessible, specially at night, and a child might die before a man could be raised from his slumbers. Wood developed a habit of stretching that conception to its permissible limits, and beyond. It seemed folly, moreover, to hunt for a man of authority a half hour before making an incision to relieve a boil. There were accident cases, too, especially at night, in which a self-confident young man might well regard with courage to make

SENATE'S FOOD LOAN PROVISION SNARLS RELIEF

Amendment of Caraway Tacks $15,000,000 to Appropriation.

HOUSE LEADERS PLAN TO REJECT PROPOSAL

Hearings Starting Today Are Expected to Influence Fight Over Aid.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

The matter of extending relief to the drought-stricken farmers was yesterday about in the same congressional stage as it was before Christmas. The Senate and House were again deadlocked on the question of providing loans for human food.

The impasse comes this times on the $45,000,000 appropriation which was authorized before the holiday recess for loans to farmers for crop and stock rehabilitation and "for other purposes incident to," which was interpreted by many senators at the time as permitting the Secretary of Agriculture to make loans for human food. Secretary Hyde, however, has made it quite clear that he intended putting no such construction on the language.

So, when the $45,000,000 appropriation bill, after being hurried through the House yesterday, came to the Senate, Senator Caraway, buttressed by a reported demonstration of destitute farmers in his State, promptly offered an amendment adding $15,000,000 for human food. Senator Jones, of Washington, made a point of order against it on the ground that it made an appropriation not previously authorized, but Senator Fess, presiding at the time, and, to the surprise of all, ruled that the point could only be made against general appropriations.

Adopted Amended Amount.

With the point overruled it was but a matter of a few minutes before the Senate adopted the amended appropriation without a record vote. Both Senator Jones and Senator McNary, of Oregon, tried to persuade Senator Caraway to bring up the human food proposition in a separate measure in order to prevent any delay in getting the $45,000,000 expenditure under way. But the latter insisted there was no need for his amendment delaying the bill and Senator Robinson, minority leader, who had compromised in the fight before the holidays, stood with him.

House leaders, Speaker Longworth and Majority Leader Tilson, promptly made known that the House would, of course, not accept the amendment. The bill goes to conference today, not getting there yesterday because Senator Black recalled the Senate bill, after it had been passed, to stick in a minor amendment.

It is doubtful that the Senate, after going up hill on the previous test with the House and then marching down again, will make a prolonged stand this time. Minority Leader Garner, of the House, began marshaling his forces in the House for a demonstration, however.

Hearings to Affect Fight.

It is not unlikely that the hearings, beginning today before the Senate agriculture committee, of John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, and Col. Arthur Woods, head of the President's unemployment committee, will influence the outcome of the fight. The reports of the demonstration at England, Ark., had their effect yesterday.

SENATE SEEKS FACTS

Managua, Nicaragua, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—President Jose Moncada of Nicaragua believes it would be unwise to withdrw American Marines from the country at this time, he told the Associated Press today. The president said he would like, however, to insure additional cooperation of Nicaraguans with the Marines in an effort to stamp out banditry.

"We have many patriotic Nicaraguans," he said, "who would offer their services and peculiar knowledge to give such cooperation in an effort to bring about lasting peace in the bandit-infested regions."

The country, at the moment, he said, has no funds with which to increase the strength of the national guard, but efforts are being made to obtain a loan of $1,000,000 from the national bank. Part of this sum would be used in the campaign against the bandits and in constructing highways to open up the northern departments, where their activities are most pronounced.

(Associated Press.)

New attempts to force the withdrawal of Marines from Nicaragua, where eight were killed last week, were initiated yesterday in the Senate.

A resolution by Senator Johnson, of California, the ranking Republican on the foreign relations committee, requesting the Secretary of State to transmit to the Senate copies of all communications and documents relating to the landing and maintenance of the Marines in Nicaragua since, 1924, was adopted without debate.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, at the same time offered a resolution requesting the immediate withdrawal of all Marines from Nicaragua. His motion was left upon the table, subject to call at any time.

"I just want to ascertain the facts, first," said Senator Johnson later in explanation of his resolution. "I think it well that we give a little concern to our own continent and our own boys at this time when some are so concerned about the troubles of Europe."

State Department officials indicated last night that all those papers would be sent to the Senate which are not incompatible with public in-

JOB PURCHASE CHARGES OUST POSTMASTERS

NO NAME MENTIONED BY POSTOFFICE UNIT

(Associated Press.)

The postmasters summarily discharged and immediately replaced by acting postmasters were Otto A. Weilbrenner, Mount Vernon; William E. Davisson, Petersburg; McKinley Ayres, Chrisney, and Mrs. Helen Roetzel, Boonville.

To replace them the Postoffice Department named Philip E. Rowe, Mount Vernon; Eugene Miller, Petersburg; Omar Kennedy, Chrisney, and Fred Johnson, Boonville. Ross Wibeler, rural carrier at Dale, was suspended.

Senators Ask Inquiry.

Indiana's two senators, Watson and Robinson, both Republicans, instigated the investigation which led swiftly to yesterday's action.

The Postoffice Department statement, issued by Arch Coleman, Assistant Postmaster General, said that at the direction of the Postmaster General, all evidence filed by the inspection division durings its investigation had been sent to the Department of Justice.

Coleman refused to name the Indiana representative implicated, saying any further announcement would have to come from the Justice Department.

Justice Department officials said they had been informed of the facts surrounding the dismissals, but would not say whether their investigation had yet been initiated.

Rowbottom Representative.

The first Indiana District is represented by Harry E. Rowbottom (Republican), reelected twice from his district, but defeated at the last election.

At his home at Evansville, Rowbottom said he knew nothing regarding the dismissals.

The Postoffice Department statement yesterday narrated the events leading up to the dismissal as follows:

"About ten days ago Senators Watson and Robinson, of Indiana, brought to the attention of the Postoffice Department gossip prevalent in Indiana to the effect that certain postmasters and other applicants for positions had been paying and causing to be paid various sums of money to a Congressman to obtain the appointments desired.

"A searching investigation was immediately inaugurated by the inspection division, resulting in evidence so conclusive in its character that these postmasters were dismissed."

The list of names followed.

Evidence Supplied.

Senator Watson said he and Senator Robinson had presented evidence to Postmaster General Brown which had been given to them by residents of the district in Indiana where the alleged sale of postmasterships took place.

"Various people of standing presented documentary evidence to Senator Robinson and me," Watson said yesterday. "We took this to the Postmaster General and asked that he make a thorough investigation. This investigation was made. The evidence gathered by five investigators was read to me by the Postmaster General. He said he would have to dismiss the postmasters involved and turn the case over to the Department of Justice.

"I told him there was no other course and I further asked that the department take complete charge of the affair, and go so far as to name the acting postmasters on its own

CREW'S MUTINY LAID TO REDS' INFLUENCE

U. S. SAILORS IN GROUP

Istanbul, Turkey, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Capt. John Bergsten, of the American freighter Hopatcong, today described how his crew of eleven—ten Americans and one Norwegian—turned communistic in a recent call at the Black Sea port of Odessa and mutinied, stabbing him.

The ship left New York September 18 with a cargo of machinery for Russia and arrived in October. After the freight was unloaded the crew went ashore, but when the seamen returned they shouted that they had turned communistic and attacked the officers.

In the ensuing struggle the belligerent mutineers entered Capt. Bergsten's cabin and stabbed him and then deserted the ship.

The captain entered a Russian hospital and remained there ten days, but said when he came out Soviet authorities refused to allow him to coal.

He and the other officers started the journey to Istanbul without the aid of seamen, and feared a lack of fuel would add to their other troubles.

This proved to be the case, for the coal gave out before the vessel reached the Bosphorus, and she drifted in the Black Sea for a day, until a wireless message brought fuel from Istanbul.

The ship finally reached Istanbul, the Turkish metropolis, and anchored in the roads the night of December 21, waiting for a heavy fog to lift. Again she met trouble, for she was rammed by the British freighter Rio Azul and a hole was stove in her stern.

Still more trouble awaited the ill-starred vessel, for when she finally tied up her engines broke down, and repairs were necessary. Capt. Bergsten eventually got the ship in order again, however, and obtained a Turkish crew for the return trip to New York.

Capt. Bergsten said that before his men mutinied he found papers in their possession which showed they had formed relations with Communists during previous voyages of the Hopicong to Russian Black Sea ports.

The Hoptcong originally was a United States Shipping Board vessel, but now is operated by the Jersey American Steamship Co., of New York. Her normal crew is about 45.

Balbo Air Squadron Off On Oversea Hop to Natal

Natal, Brazil, Jan. 6 (Tuesday) (A.P.).—A radiogram received here shortly after midnight from the Italian cruiser Marocello said that the squadron of Gen. Italo Balbo, Italian air minister, took off from Bolama, Portuguese Guinea, at 2 a. m., Greenwich Meridian time (9 p. m., Monday, E. S. T.), on a transatlantic flight to Natal and Rio de Janeiro.

400,000 Aliens in U. S. Illegally, Doak Says

Only 25 Per Cent Can Be Deported, He Informs Senate, and Six Years Would Be Needed to Do So.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

There are about 400,000 aliens unlawfully abiding in the United States, Secretary of Labor W. N. Doak has notified the Senate. He submitted the estimate in response to a request contained in a Senate resolution adopted early in December.

The resolution, introduced by Senator Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona, was in the interest of America's unemployed, the thought behind it being that if aliens could be deported faster there would be more jobs for American citizens.

Regarded from an employment standpoint, Secretary Doak's report to the Senate is not very encouraging. He estimates that only about 25 per cent, or 100,000 of the aliens, are deportable, the remainder, for one reason or another, being beyond the deportation provisions of the immigration laws.

And while Secretary Doak doesn't say so, it stands to reason that a good percentage of the 100,000 are themselves out of work, or else earning a living through crime.

Moreover, it would take nearly six years to get rid of 100,000 aliens at the rate deportations are now being carried out, the number last year having been 16,631. This number, Secretary Doak tells the Senate, represents a maximum of the results which can be accomplished with the present appropriation and immigration force.

With an increase in the appropriation and the force, Secretary Doak said, the number of deportations might be boosted 25 per cent, or to a total of approximately 20,000 the first year.

In his report, Secretary Doak points out that prior to 1921, when the first quota limit law went into effect, there were few incentives for aliens to come in without permission. Up until then all aliens, with the exception of certain Oriental peoples, could gain entry if they were able to meet the physical, mental, moral and economic tests. Consequently, those who did come in unlawfully were Orientals and the diseased, the illiterate and the criminals.

The quota law of 1921, with its limitation on the number of aliens that could come from each country, provided the incentive that led thousands to come in illegally. The quota law of 1924 was even more drastic than that of 1921.

Since 1924, Secretary Doak said, the number of immigration officers along the borders and at the seaports has been increased, with a reduction in the number of aliens who have gained illegal entry.

The number of aliens who come through Mexico or Canada has been materially reduced, he said, as has the number who desert ships at American seaports. The number of these ships' deserters, he said, is slightly less than 11,000 a year.

The number of aliens who come in as visitors and then stay here unlawfully was estimated by Secretary Doak as from 5 to 7 per cent.

Responding to the Senate's invitation that he recommend changes in the immigration laws that would facilitate deportations, Secretary Doak suggested that field officers be allowed to sign warrants for the arrest of aliens. At present, he alone may sign such warrants, and the result is

At Least 82 Dead In Philippine Gale

Typhoon Sweeps Over Two Islands and Greater Loss Is Feared.

Manila, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—With 82 dead and 50 missing, fears were felt tonight of even greater loss as a result of the typhoon which roared across the central Philippine Islands last week-end.

Wires were prostrated and roads blocked, and belated reports indicated the list of casualties probably would be lengthened with restoration of communication.

A large number of native fishermen perished in the sinking of many small boats off the coasts of Leyte and Cebu Islands. Property damage of those islands was reported more than $500,000 and $250,000 respectively.

Further reports, it was feared, would bring details similar to the great storms on Leyte Island of November, 1928, when 264 persons died, and May, 1929, with 119 deaths.

Police Say Missing Woman Still Lives

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The disappearance of Mrs. P. Harry Long, 24, member of the Junior League here, and mother of a baby son, was unsolved tonight, although two police officers said they have reason to believe she is alive.

Detective Inspector W. T. Griffin and Capt. John Foppiano, declined to say why they altered their previously expressed fear, shared by her family, that she drowned herself in the Mississippi River.

Mrs. Long, dark-haired debutante of a few years ago, played bridge yesterday afternoon, made engagements with a dentist, and with friends for dinner and a show tonight, and disappeared. Her automobile was found near the river bank and her family has received no word from her since she vanished last night.

WINDSTORM SWEEPS FOUR STATES; 6 DIE

MANY BUILDINGS RAZED

Boydton, Va., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Mrs. Grover Henderson, wife of a farmer, was killed late today in a windstorm that struck her home one mile southeast of here. Her 2-year-old child was injured.

The roof of the Henderson's home collapsed in the face of the blow and several outbuildings were blown down. The home of a neighboring farmer also was blown down.

The storm, which folowed a day of pouring rain, swept a 50-yard path for two miles.

Uniontown, Pa., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—A midwinter windstorm that reached a hurricane velocity of 102 miles an hour at Uniontown struck sections of western Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia today.

Buildings were unroofed and the side of one was torn away, windows were broken, plants were forced into idleness for a few hours by the tearing down of power lines and communications were disrupted.

At Greensburg large plate glass windows in several stores were damaged. The roof of a residence was torn off at Grafton, W. Va., and a school house was damaged at Morgantown, W. Va.

In Uniontown a signboard was swept down from a height of 100 feet, part of it causing bruises to Patroiman Joseph Thomas and another portion damaging an automobile driven by F. G. Burton, Steubenville, Ohio, who was unharmed.

Norlina, N. C., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Five persons, all Negroes, were killed when a windstorm destroyed four dwellings, two churches and a Negro school about 2 miles north of here late today.

Jim Dunston, Negro, and his three sons were killed when the storm struck their home. A fourth son was seriously injured, and is in a Henderson, N. C., hospital. The mother and a 3-year-old child escaped injury.

About 2 miles farther north the storm struck a dormitory of a Negro farm life school, killing a Negro girl. In this same vicinity the Locust Grove and New Light Negro churches were demolished. Two houses were also destroyed, but no one was hurt.

Another dwelling near the Dunston home was destroyed.

Yanceyville, N. C., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—A tornado swept across Rockingham County north of here this afternoon, demolishing a number of buildings, unroofing others, and causing injuries to at least two persons.

The residence of Robert T. Wilson, attorney, who lives near White, was unroofed and the porch torn away. Several small buildings near Wilson's dwelling were demolished.

Eyewitnesses said they saw a funnel-shaped cloud dipping across the country. Rain accompanied the tornado.

George Carter, student, who lives about three miles south of Danville,

Calvin Coolidge Says:

Another proposal to be made in the name of relieving unemployment will undoubtedly be an extension of Government ownership. Healthy and normal employment consists of serving another for his personal satisfaction or profit. As the Government is not personal, its proper business employment would be for those serving for its profit. Public works are on a different footing and need not be considered.

For the wage earners to benefit in time of general depression it would be necessary to assume that Government ownership would prevent fluctuations in the business in which it engages. Our largest Government business is the postoffice in which the receipts rise and fall extensively.

If it is assumed that payment of wages will go on without work, that is not employment but relief. Then no one should work.

The Government has never shown much aptitude for real business. The Congress will not permit it to be conducted by a competent executive but constantly intervenes. The most free, progressive and satisfactory method ever devised for the equitable distribution of property is to permit the people to care for themselves by conducting their own business. They have more wisdom than any Government.

responsibility. It is all very unfortunate and Senator Robinson and I want the whole affair handled by the regular Government officers."

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Washington dispatches telling of the Postoffice Department's action against four postmasters and a rural carrier were telephoned to Representative Rowbottom at his home here by newspaper men. He said he had no knowledge of the situation.

Shortly after receiving the information the congressman left his home and word was given out by his wife that he would not return until tomorrow morning.

He was first elected to the Sixty-ninth Congress, taking office March 4, 1925. He was twice reelected, but was defeated in the election last November by John W. Boehne, Democrat.

No Notice Received.

Mrs. Helen Roetzel, mentioned in the Washington dispatch as having been dismissed as postmaster at Booneville, said she had not received word of her dismissal. She expressed surprise.

She said she had recently informed two Government inspectors who called at her office that following her appointment she paid $200 into the campaign fund of Representative Rowbottom. She said she was told there was a deficit in the campaign fund. She said one of the inspectors told her that such a contribution was legitimate.

Mrs. Roetzel said she was unacquainted with political matters and added that she knew of nothing irregular in connection with the appointment. She has held the office three years.

Active in Campaign.

McKinley Ayres, 34-year-old war veteran, likewise had not heard of his dismissal as postmaster at Chrisney. He declined to dicus the matter. He has held the position nine years.

William E. Davisson, of Petersburg, expressed surprise when informed of the Washington dispatch saying he had been dismissed as postmater. He had served four years and was a candidate for reappointment. He was active in Rowbottom's campaign during the last election.

Otto A. Weilbrenner, of Mount Vernon, who received notification of his dismissal this afternoon, tonight said he made a contribution to the campaign fund of Representative Rowbottom, but refused to say what the amount was. Weilbrenner was First District campaign manager for Rowbottom, during the last campaign, and formerly was Posey County Republican chairman.

Representative Rowbottom served three terms in the Indiana Legislature bfore his election to Congress. He is 40 years old.

Lord Reading Asks Cabinet for India

Pledges Liberal Party Support if Safeguards Are Given All.

London, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Lord Reading, speaking officially for the Liberal party, today pledged support for full responsible government in India provided proper safeguards and reservations are made for the "reasonable security" of all interests there.

His plan would provide India with a cabinet having full collective responsibility to the Indian legislature. The British viceroy, or governor-general, would be constituted the executive authority to carry out the decisions of the cabinet and the king-emperor would remain the nominal sovereign as he does throughout the British realm.

The fate of the round-table conference now seems to hang on the decision of the strong Conservative party in the British Parliament, whose chief delegate at the conference is Lord Peel. He has yet to make his pronouncement and it is likely that Premier Ramsay MacDonald will await it before revealing the Labor government's plan for India's future.

Woman Is Accused Of Perjury Plot

Indictment Follows Formal Application for Papers of Naturalization.

Charges of subornation of perjury are contained in an indictment returned yesterday against Gertrude Emelda Shortell, a beauty parlor supervisor, and John Hale Smith, described as an attorney. The charge grows out of an application for naturalization papers made by the woman on February 15, 1929.

According to the United States attorney's office the woman applied for papers, and one of her witnesses—Mrs. Clifford D. Fenk, of Cherrydale, Va., at that time Marjorie V. Smith—swore that the applicant had been a resident of the District for one year. Investigation revealed, however, that Miss Shortell had been in the District only a little over two months.

Miss Shortell is 36 years old and a native of Ireland. She is supervisor of a beauty parlor branch on Connecticut avenue northwest near O street.

Gambling Charge Made After Raid

Arrest Made in Alleged Gaming House Near U. S. Printery.

Another of the alleged gambling institutions complained of by Public Printer George Carter fell yesterday, when a special squad of detectives, attached to Inspector T. R. Bean's squad, raided a place on H street, near North Capitol street, northwest, directly across the street from the Government's printery, and arrested Harvey A. Talley.

Talley, who is 30 years old, was booked at the Sixth Precinct on a charge of permitting gaming. Racing slips and other equipment usually found in gambling houses were seized by police and are being held as evidence, police said.

The raid on the place is the sixth in the neighborhood within two months. Two other places, said by police to exist in the immediate vicinity, are being watched.

Roosevelt Promises Aid In Bank Investigation

New York, Jan. 5 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Gov. Roosevelt tonight in a letter to District Attorney Crain urged "prompt and vigorous" investigation of the failure of the Bank of United States to determine if criminal acts had been committed.

"I shall be pleased to lend any assistance within my power," the governor wrote. The governor's letter followed receipt by him of a message from State Banking Superintendent Broderick in which the latter pointed out that he had no jurisdiction over a criminal prosecution.

G. O. P. CHIEFS FACE SENATE QUIZ TODAY

Lucas and Nutt Called by Nye to Tell Inquiry of $50,000 Fund.

MONTANA HEARING NEAR

(Associated Press.)

The inquiry which provoked the present breach between the Senate's independent Republicans and the regular party leadership will be resumed today with two officers of the Republican national committee on the witness stand.

Robert H. Lucas, executive director, and Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer, have been summoned before the Senate campaign funds investigating committee to tell in detail of the use made of a $50,000 account maintained at a Washington bank by the national committee.

It was this account which secured a loan to Lucas with part of which he paid for literature circulated in Nebraska opposing the reelection of Senator George W. Norris, a leader among the independent Republicans.

Montana Inquiry Forecast.

Representative Howard (Democrat), Nebraska, yesterday demanded that Lucas file with the Clerk of the House a statement of his expenses in the compaign against Norris. He said the report of the Republican national committee had failed to include the $4,000 loan to Lucas.

Chairman Nye, of the Senate committee, announced his group probably would find it necessary to go into Montana about January 15 to investigate rumors that $100,000 was "promised Republican leaders of that State to contest the election of Senator Thomas J. Walsh."

The reports were, he said, that on the basis of this pledge the Republican State committee incurred a heavy indebtedness and still owed $40,000 because the money was not forthcoming. Walsh was reelected.

Capital Banker Called.

In addition to Nutt and Lucas, today's witnesses are to include James B. Reynolds, vice president of the Commercial National Bank, of this city, and Ralph M. Johnson, bookkeeper for the Independent Publishing Co.

It was in the Commercial National that Nutt opened the $50,000 special account with two deposits for the use of Lucas and himself. Lucas contracted with the Independent Publishing Co. for the anti-Norris literature, spending, he testified, $800 of the $4,000 loan for that purpose.

Lucas told the Nye committee several weeks ago he would make a report of this expenditure to Congress on January 1 in compliance with the law. Committee investigators failed to find this report yesterday and Howard said off the floor of the House he would demand an investigation.

Lucas, however, said at party headquarters that he transmitted the report to the secretary of the Senate on December 23 when informed that was the proper filing place.

Umbrella-Blinded Women Hit by Car

Misses Holloway and Hinds Receive Painful Injuries.

Huddled together under an umbrella so that they could not see the auto which was bearing down on them through the driving rain, two women were struck and painfully injured last night. The accident occurred at Connecticut avenue and Jefferson place. The driver, Felix C. Peckham, Princeton place near Warder, was not held.

Miss Willie Lucille Holloway, 18, was treated at Georgetown University Hospital for a broken right kneecap. Miss Beatrice Hinds, 28, suffered a fractured pelvis and lacerations of the head. She was removed to Emergency Hospital. Both live at 1800 K street northwest.

Peckham was driving south on Connecticut avenue when the mishap occurred. V. L. Robinson, assistant manager of the A. A. A. here, took both women home, where a private physician ordered both to be removed to a hospital. Peckham drove Miss Hinds to Emergency, while Miss Holloway was taken to Georgetown for special treatment by a bone specialist.

I. C. C. IS HIT BY TWO DECISIONS OF COURT

U. S. TAX CASES DECIDED

The Interstate Commerce Commission was dealt two blows yesterday by the Supreme Court.

Returning from a three-week recess, the highest tribunal set aside a commission order that Florida intrastate freight rates on logs be increased and ruled a special fund of $3,500,000 created in the reorganization of the St. Paul Railroad was free from the commission's control.

In the former case the court, which several years ago sustained the commission's conditional authority over interstate rates, ruled the rates imposed by the commission were unjustified.

Justices Stone, Brandeis and Holmes dissented from the St. Paul decision while Chief Justice Hughes took no part in its consideration. The railroad had maintained this fund was created to pay the fees of counsel and reorganization managers.

One 5-to-4 Decision.

In a case from New Jersey the court sustained the validity of uniform insurance commissions in its first 5-to-4 decision since Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Roberts went upon the bench. They lined up with Justice Holmes, Brandeis and Stone, and opposed Justices Van Devanter, McReynolds, Sutherland and Butler.

Refusing to pass on the validity of the Federal radio act, under which the Government asserts jurisdiction over the air, the court took the position the questions raising the issue had not been properly shaped.

Illegal methods used by the prohibition authorities in searching the premises of the Go-Bart Corporation on Fifth avenue, New York City, were severely censured and evidence unlawfully obtained was ordered returned.

Federal judges were held to have authority to reduce sentences imposed in criminal cases after the offender had started to serve the terms originally imposed on them.

One Jones Act Case.

The Jones act was held to apply to longshoremen injured while working on foreign vessels in American waters, and rates made by the Wisconsin Railroad Commission to apply to the Washburn Water Works Co., were set aside.

States as well as the Federal Government were declared by the court to have the right to tax as income profits from the sale of State, Federal and municipal bonds.

The court also decided a number of Federal tax cases, holding in four that waivers given by taxpayers after the statute of limitations had expired gave the Government the right to make additional assessments and enforce payments of taxes.

The court consented to review one case on its merits and refused to review twelve. It also declined to review its former decisions in seven cases, including that sustaining an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission making a new division of freight rates on traffic exchanged by the railroads in the Southwestern and Western groups.

Beulah Limerick's Diary Bares Carefree Philosophy

"Enjoy Life While You Can," She Wrote as She Recorded Rounds of Pleasure Which Marked Months Preceding Her Tragic Death.

Life for Beulah Limerick was something to be enjoyed. In her little leather-bound diary on December 3 she wrote her concept of life. "Oh, well, enjoy life while you can is my motto."

And through its pages, from September until December, she chronicled the actual demonstration of her philosophy of life. Each page tells the story of her dining, drinking, dancing, swimming, and the pleasure she gained through her "Whoopee Club."

On September 8 she wrote: "—— was so sweet to Martha and me. We went to Alexandria. Came home. Went out with ——. We have just about come to the parting of the ways. Had some wine and beer."

Inspector William S. Shelby would not reveal the names of the men mentioned in the book; but there were many. Her concern for the "Whoopee Club" seems to have been a great interest in her life. On September 9 she wrote, "—— gave me so much hope for my club and new members. Gee, I'm happy." On the following day she again registered her concern for the club. "Gosh, I hope our club is a success. —— sang his new song for me. Had some beer. Very good and feel fine."

"Sept. 12. Someone called me at 2 a. m. Feature that. Went to jail; but couldn't get in. Oh, well.

"Sept. 13. Cleaned all morning. —— came over. I realized just how much I hated him. Hope I never see him again. Got a headache and how! Went to church. Went swimming.

"Sept. 16. Went to the meeting. —— started a fight and got locked up, but I had a swell time anyway. Three hours sleep—oh, well, just plain well. Heard plenty of gossip, of course.

"Oct. 12. ——'s dance. What a night!

"Oct. 16. Our big night. Our real party. What a night! Still like ——. Wonder how long it will last."

Similar entries appeared throughout October and November when she moved to the house where the murder occurred. "Had a few thrills since the last entry. Met several new ones. Wonder how much I do care for ——.

"Dec. 2. Simply can't get up early. Came home around 6. Played cards awhile. —— is really darling. I believe he's ace high now. I wonder how long it will last.

"Dec. 3. Some day I'm going to get up early. When I get in late and stay up. Oh, well, enjoy life while you can is my motto. I don't care—got drunk—but I had lots of fun.

"Dec. 6. Went to cemetery. I got dinner and danced some. It would rain!"

Two days later she asked herself "why she ever started a diary." Find out now that—that is just a passing fancy—and I went out. Came back and learned something so damned silly. Went out to inspect the dance hall—kind of bawled me out. Oh, my—embroidered all day—came by.

This was her last entry. In the last sentence she could have written "Death" in the blank. The moving trigger finger of hate penned the last page in her life's diary in the dilapidated basement room. But the girl must have been satisfied. She held as her motto, "Enjoy life when you can," and her entries say she did.

Six Hurt in Crash On Way to Work

Six persons were injured in a collision yesterday when the car in which they were riding collided with a truck at First and L streets northwest. The injured persons were all en route to the Government Printing Office, where they are employed.

Those hurt were Hugh Land, of Takoma Park, Md., who was the most seriously injured, receiving several cuts and bruises and possible internal injuries; D. P. Clarke, W. H. Whitaker, Mrs. Ada Parr, H. A. McGowan and B. L. Wehmhuff, all of the Maryland town. They were all treated at Sibley Hospital for minor cuts and bruises, and, with the exception of Land, they were all able to continue to their work.

Clarke was said by police to be the driver of the car in which the six persons were riding. His car collided with the truck, which was driven by Isador Snowden, colored, of 458 N street northwest, who is being held by police of the Second Precinct pending an investigation of the accident. Clarke's car was overturned by the impact, and crashed into another car owned by Miss Ruby Duffey, a teacher at the Jones School, her car being parked on the street near the scene of the accident.

Broker Is Charged With $300 Fraud

Alleged to have defrauded Craig L. Rudisill, of Marshall, N. C., in connection with a stock transaction, I. S. Fuller, manager of De Wolfe-Stewart & Co., stock brokers, with offices in the Evans Building, was indicted yesterday on a charge of embezzlement.

According to the allegations Rudisill ordered 20 shares of Radio Corporation of America stock and sent a check for $300, but has never received his stock or a receipt for his money.

Rudisill told the United States Attorney's office that Fuller telephoned to him and suggested the purchase of 100 shares of the stock.

Suit for Divorce Cites Intoxication

Charges of habitual intoxication are made in a suit for limited divorce filed yesterday in District Supreme Court by Mrs. Emily A. McCoy, of Sixteenth street northwest, near Allison street, against Chauncey H. McCoy, whose address is not given.

McCoy is pictured by the wife as having been under the influence of liquor four nights a week since 1927. She also charges him with assault and with bringing home companions who keep the family awake until late hours.

The McCoys were married August 9, 1926, and have two children. The wife seeks alimony and custody of the children in addition to a decree. Attorneys Raymond Neudecker and Jean Boardman appear for her.

DETAINED QUARTET FACES JURY TODAY

time to investigate him," Mr. Whelan said last night.

Langdon's incarceration was caused by his alleged annoyances of the girl and his discovery of a .25-caliber shell in a coffee cup in the kitchen of the Limerick home early Friday morning while on guard duty at the death house.

Langdon told Capt. Kelly that he was looking for a gun when he discovered the shell, and later found a bullet in the flooring underneath the cot on which the girl was murdered.

Interrogation of witnesses yesterday, Capt. Kelly said, revealed that on Wednesday morning, after the murder, the Limerick family and the Reeds had drunk coffee from the cups and there was no shell in them at that time. Mrs. Dora Limerick, the girl's mother, Capt. Kelly said, cleaned the cups before the coffee was poured.

Inspector Shelby declared yesterday that he had looked in the cups on Thursday. One of them, he said, had enough coffee in it to conceal a bullet. But in view of Mrs. Limerick's statement the authorities believe that no bullet was in them on Thursday.

Langdon told police that he had peered through the window of the basement room at 1:40 o'clock and again at 4 o'clock on the morning of the murder. At the later hour, he said, he saw the girl sleeping on the cot, with the covers about her head. He said he flashed his service light through a door window.

Capt. Kelly made a test of Langdon's statement and said it would have been possible for Langdon to have seen the girl from the door window.

LEGION CERTIFICATE BILL IS SPONSORED

HAWLEY FIGHTS HEARING

(Associated Press.)

Amid echoing demands for cash payment on adusted certificates, Chairman Johnson, of the House veterans committee, yesterday prepared to introduce a bill proposing the greatest liberalization asked by the American Legion since existing provisions were enacted seven years ago.

The bill drafted by the legion would amend the World War veterans act in 34 separate ways. It would increase pensions rates, provide hospitalization for all veterans regardless of service connection of their ills; extend present temporary dependency allowances to dependents of permanently disabled; and supply additional widows and orphans pensions.

Payment Demand Renewed.

Advocates of certificate payments renewed their demands for a hearing on a number of such proposals, but Chairman Hawley, of the ways and means committee, stood firmly against taking them up.

Representative Garner, of Texas, the Democratic leader, introduced a bill to provide cash payment of the surrender value of the certificates, at the option of the veteran. Representative Fish (Republican), New York, said he had reason to believe the national commnader of the legion was gauging sentiment on the New Yorker's request that the executive committee be called together to take a stand on the question.

"If he does not respond within a few days," Fish added, "I will have something more to say."

The New Yorker is sponsoring cash payment of 25 per cent of the final face value of the certificates, whether or not the veterans have borrowed from the Government on them. Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, said about 100 members had signed his petition to force action on his bill for payment in full.

Ludlow Introduces Bill.

Representative Ludlow (Democrat), Indiana, also introduced a bill yesterday to authorize the director of the Veterans' Bureau to pay the veterans an amount equal to the value of his certificate, increased by 25 per cent, plus 4 per cent interest.

The American Legion bill includes two provisions which experts said last year would call for an outlay of $30,000,000 and $12,000,000 each. These are, respectively, one to give to dependents of permanently disabled the same allowances now available to dependents of temporarily disabled veterans, and one to place chronic and constitutional diseases developed before 1925 on a list of maladies presumed of service origin.

World War disability pension rates, now ranging from $12 to $40 monthly, would be made to conform with Spanish-American War disability allowances, which range from $10 to $60 a month.

The bill would extend to World War widows and orphans the same pensions now allowed Spanish-American War dependents—$30 monthly for widows and $6 for children.

Power Firm Held Shoals Plan Bar

(Associated Press.)

Testimony by Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of Army Engineers, that the Government virtually is "at the mercy" of the Alabama Power Co. in disposing of Muscle Shoals power was made public yesterday by the appropriations committee in reporting the Army supply bill to the House.

This point bore directly on the only disagreement remaining between Senate and House conferees on the measure to dispose of the Shoals plant. The House delegates have ceded to the Senate on Government operation of the power plant but have held steadfast against the construction of Government transmission lines from the power house to municipal customers.

The conferees plan to renew efforts for an agreement today, but Chairman Snell, of the House rules committee, affirmed again yesterday his opposition to the Government power lines, though he said he was willing to accept a compromise to permit the Government to ask appropriations for this purpose later if it finds itself unable to sell current at the power house.

Oil Industry Relief Plan Is Acclaimed

Suggestion of Governors for Federal Meeting Wins Support.

Oklahoma City, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—A favorable ripple of sentiment from Southwestern and Western oil States and an offer of Government cooperation came today in the wake of a call by the governors of Oklahoma and Kansas for a Washington conference to plan relief for the distressed petroleum industry.

Several of the eight State executives asked by Gov. Holloway of Oklahoma and Reed of Kansas, expressed approval and prepared to join in plans for the January 15 meeting.

The Federal Oil Conservation Board, it was said at Washington, stood ready to assist the governors. Although no comment was forthcoming from Chairman Wilbur, it was indicated President Hoover might ask the meeting be a continuation of the conference called by him at Colorado Springs early in 1929.

Decision Refuses Radio Act Ruling

(Associated Press.)

Efforts to obtain an opinion from the Supreme Court on the validity of the law under which the Radio Commission operates yesterday met with failure. The opinion was sought in cases from Chicago which raised the question whether broadcasting stations had a property right to the air.

Justice Roberts, in rendering the court's decision not to pass on the question, said the cases had not been presented in such form as to require an opinion.

The cases affected three broadcasting stations at Chicago, WCRW, operated by Clinton R. White, and WMBB and WOK, operated by American Bond & Mortgage Co. and Trianon, Inc. In the former case the commission has ordered a reduction of power, and in the latter two it ordered the stations closed. After the trial court had sustained the commission, the circuit court asked a number of questions of the Supreme Court relating to the validity of the act. The owners of the stations took the ground they had vested rights which could not constitutionally be taken from them by the Federal Government without compensation.

REFUSING TO WORK, 30 SEAMEN JAILED

Failure to Get Leave Over Week-End Basis for Act of Britishers.

MESSAGES ARE HALTED

Plymouth, England, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Thirty seamen of H. M. S. Lucia, submarine depot ship, were under arrest today and facing possible court martial for refusing to work when their week-end shore leave was cancelled.

While an official inquiry went forward into the affair, which was termed by Admiral Sir Hubert Bland, commander in chief of the Devonport base, as "not a mutiny," the men were held in barracks ashore. All communication between the Lucia and the shore was cut, no visitors were permitted aboard the ship, and her officers and men were forbidden to land or send messages to relatives or friends.

An official statement issued tonight by the admiralty regarding the causes of the trouble said:

Official Report Quoted.

"On Sunday morning, January 4, an infraction of discipline occurred aboard H. M. S. Lucia in the following circumstances:

"The Lucia was due to undock Wednesday, December 31, but owing to weather conditions was unable to do so until Thursday, January 1, leaving only a very short period before the date of her sailing with the Atlantic fleet, in which she had to coal, ammunition, clean and paint ship and prepare for the sea.

"This precluded week-end leave and necessitated the crew's working Sunday morning. In these circumstances 30 seamen so far forgot their duty as to remain below and shut themselves in when ordered to parade on deck for duty Sunday morning.

Men Held Under Arrest.

"In consequence, the men were arrested and taken in custody to the naval barracks.

"The court of inquiry which sat today will continue to sit tomorrow, and further action will depend upon the results of its investigation. A naval court's inquiry is invariably held behind closed doors, but if the matter should result in a court-martial, this, in accordance with custom, will be open to the public."

The Lucia was due to leave Thursday with six submarines to join the Atlantic fleet for its spring cruise.

Five-Day City Week Urged.

Boston, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Mayor James M. Curley recommended a five-day week for all city employes in his annual message to the city council today. He asked the council to study the reduction in hours this year so that it might be put into effect in 1932.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

THERE is a lot of talk going around, which is to say that the story is being bruited about in political circles and with some degree of logic, that Ambassador Walter Edge will be returning from Paris soon, or rather about the time the 1932 campaign warms up, to pick off the Vice Presidential nomination.

Hoover, a Western dry, and Edge, an Eastern wet—what a nice ticket that would make, those who are passing out the story contend. The perfect balance for which all political parties strive.

Of course, the ambassador running for the Vice Presidency as a wet with the Presidential candidate a dry, would be able to add about as many wet votes to the ticket, as Robinson added dry votes to the Democratic ticket in 1928 with Mr. Smith running as a wet. But that is no reason why an argument for Mr. Edge should not be advanced.

• • • •

ONE hears a lot of speculation nowadays about the next Republican vice presidential candidate, and very little of it seems to take into consideration the likelihood that Mr. Curtis would like to run himself.

It is doubtful if he would make any such fight for the nomination as he made in 1928 and we would be very much surprised if he did not consider it the proper thing for the party to do to offer him the nomination again just as Mr. Hoover will be renominated for President.

But somehow all speculation on the subject moves on the assumption that the vice presidential nomination is open with a fair field ahead.

Of course, Mr. Hoover and Mr. Curtis are as far apart in political philosophy as the two poles, but we can't subscribe to the belief entertained in many quarters that the two men are at daggers' points. Mr. Curtis attends the Cabinet meetings and so far as we can observe seeks conscientiously to report on the state and mood of the Senate. We imagine, in fact, that he puts out right good advice.

• • • •

AND, of course, it may be that the reason there is speculation as to whom his successor will be is founded on nothing more than the fact that the speculation about whom will be the next Republican presidential candidate is now so silly as to be out, and the speculators simply have to revert to the Vice Presidency.

There is this much to the Edge story, though. His friends are talking it up.

POWER APPOINTEES UNDER NEW ATTACK

(Associated Press.)

Reconsideration of the confirmation of three of the new power commissioners because of their dismissal of Charles A. Rusell and William V. King, the commission's solicitor and chief engineer, respectively, was sought yesterday in the Senate.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Montana, moved another vote on the nomination of Chairman Smith and Commissioners Garsaud and Draper, and to request President Hoover to return the notification of their confirmations.

"I can not escape the sinister significance of the commission's action in dismissing these two faithful public servants," Walsh said.

He added he considered the action of the commission as "serving notice to every man in public service that, should he find anything wrong in the department in which he is engaged, he should keep his mouth shut, under pain of dismissal."

The Senate adjourned without reaching action on Walsh's motions, but will continue discussion today.

A dozen senators, both Republicans and Democrats, have announced they will support the motion.

Administration leaders made plans to combat the movement, however, and there were indications of extended debate before a final vote.

Walsh recalled that the three commissioners were confirmed December 19 and 20, and that on December 23, as their first action to be made public, they announced the removal of Russell, King and Frank E. Bonner, executive secretary of the commission.

Since then the commission has announced it will consider applications from the employes to restore them to their former positions.

ARKANSAS GOVERNOR TELLS RELIEF PLANS

LATE DROUGHT BLAMED

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Gov. Harvey Parnell today telegraphed a number of Eastern newspapers saying the people of Arkansas and the American Red Cross were handling relief in a satisfactory manner among farmers impoverished by last summer's drought and subsequent crop failures.

The messages were sent in reply to queries from the newspapers regarding destitute conditions that were emphasized Saturday as more than 300 farmers marched on the town of England, demanded food of merchants there, and were given enough to satisfy their hunger.

England, Ark., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Red Cross relief headquarters was moved to more commodious quarters in the fire station here late today to handle crowds which came seeking food.

At one time during the afternoon upward of 300 persons, mostly Negroes, gathered in the sunny spaces about the station waiting their turn to fill out requisitions.

Meanwhile, local Red Cross officials met with Miss Emma Mortenson, of St. Louis, representative of the mid-Western branch of the American Red Cross, to determine the policy to be pursued during the coming months among drought-ridden farmers of this section. Local officials were ordered to continue relief work as in the past.

The England chapter embraces eleven townships, and estimates made today by the Red Cross point toward biweekly relief for approximately 1,200 families.

Requisitioning and donation of supplies proceeded smoothly today. Watch was made by officials to prevent impostors gaining supplies, and about 120 families were supplied by nightfall.

SENATE'S FOOD LOAN PLAN SNARLS RELIEF

had the situation in that State in hand, but Senator Caraway cited the outbreak as evidence of the inadequacy of Red Cross relief. The Red Cross also sought to minimize the demonstration, one agent reporting that 40 farmers in one locality had been responsible.

The first thing yesterday Senator Caraway introduced a bill extending the relief to food purchases, but when the drought appropriation came over from the House he incorporated his plan in that bill.

Passage of the measure in the House was attended by 45 minutes of discussion, during which there were demands that there should also be some relief for the unemployed in the cities and expressions of regret that the bill did not provide for loans for human food. This was all, however, more or less perfunctory.

The Department of Agriculture revealed that the maximum loan under the $45,000,000 appropriation will be about $2,000, while the average will be about $250. This is strictly for crop and stock rehabilitation.

Playmate's Bullet Kills Roanoke Girl

Revolver Found in Trunk Is Accidentally Fired; Boy Is Exonerated.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Agnes Jameson, 13, was fatally wounded this afternoon by a playmate at whose home she was visiting. A bullet from a .32-caliber revolver struck her in the right temple, causing death an hour later at a hospital.

Lloyd Creger, 13, who fired the shot, was not held responsible by Dr. Charles M. Irvin, city coroner, and the police. Dr. Irvin declared the child's death to be accidental.

The children, who had been lifelong playmates, were alone in the apartment at the time of the shooting. They had been searching through a trunk when the gun was discovered. The shot attracted the attention of neighbors, who called an ambulance.

Schafer Says Lobbyist Is on Pay Roll of Senate

(Associated Press.)

Representative Schafer (Republican), Wisconsin, told the House yesterday that "the dirtiest paid lobbyist who ever came to Washington" is on the pay roll of the Senate.

"In a few days I will have something to say about the sanctimonious pseudo-Republicans," Schafer declared, adding that some of the investigators would "do well to investigate men on their own pay roll." Schafer's statement was made in reply to Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, who said "the billion-dollar tariff wall," and not prohibition, is responsible for the business depression.

FIGHT ON PAY RAISE ENTERS NEW PHASE

House Committee Reports War Department's Bill With Increases Out.

WOOD AMENDMENT IS IN

The fight over increases in pay next year for overnment employes getting under-average salaries edged a little bit farther yesterday into the national political fight over an extra session of Congress.

The House appropriations committee reported the War Department annual appropriation bill with the estimates for increases stricken out and the so-called Wood amendment in. The Wood amendment had been repudiated by the House in the course of consideration of the Interior Department appropriation bill.

Nothing was done about those provisions in the House because there was not enough time. When they are reached in the course of consideration of the measure there will be another fight led by Representative Fiorello LaGuardia (Republican), of New York, to strike out the Wood amendment and the fight probably will be successful.

In the meantime the Senate has the Interior bill under consideration. It voted yesterday in favor of several committee amendments, reinserting the amounts estimated to provide 30 per cent of the total needed to bring under-average salaries in those departments up to grade and there is little doubt that the Senate will put back the full amount estimated for this purpose.

The Senate also reappointed its conferees on the Postoffice-Treasury appropriation bill. This was the first annual supply measure passed by the House. It not only carried the Wood amendment, but it also failed to provide the funds for estimated necessary increases. The conferees reappointed were Senators Phipps, of Colorado; Smoot, of Utah, and Moses, of New Hampshire (Republicans), and Senators Harris, of Georgia, and Glass, of Virginia (Democrats).

These conferees at a former meeting with the House representatives agreed to eliminate from the Post-office-Treasury bill the estimates for increases in salaries. They said they traded this for the Wood amendment. The trade, however, was a very empty one inasmuch as the House itself repudiated the Wood amendment in the Interior bill and the only thing the Senate proposed the House did not agree to was the increases the conferees yielded.

Led by Senator Smith W. Brookhart (Republican), of Iowa, the Senate repudiated the conference report. That was before the Christmas recess. The reappointment of the conferees yesterday was just about a matter of form.

Both sides in the fight have been working strenuously in the meantime because on the outcome of the fight over the first bill will depend the treatment in all the appropriation bills. Pending settlement of the issue in the first bill both sides are going along as they were.

The House machine was greased yesterday to put out of the way all necessary legislation to avoid requiring an extra session. The appropriations committee reported in addition to the War Department appropriation bill a deficiency appropriation bill. The War bill carried $446,024,000 and the deficiency $92,383,000.

Consideration of the deficiency bill is to be begun today. One item in the bill calls for $543,000 for the Prohibition Bureau, which would allow an immediate increase of 130 agents. Representative Wood incidentally told Assistant Attorney General Youngquist, in the course of executive hearings, that he thought that the agents caused more trouble than they did good and suggested their special authority be taken from them. Mr. Youngquist was not positive, but said Mr. Wood's idea would be given attention.

War veterans will get a share of the deficiency appropriation to the tune of $55,750,000 for disability compensation and another $34,000,000 was provided for Federal aid in highway building.

Of the total carried in the War bill $334,956,000 was for maintenance of the Army and defenses, $111,000,000 for so-called nonmilitary activities. These latter included river and harbor improvements, $60,000,000; flood control on the Mississippi River, $35,000,000.

Minister and Nephew Held on Arson Charge

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The Rev. William I. Frary, 65, Methodist minister, and his nephew, Robert Frary, 27, were held today on arson charges after the elder Frary had confessed, according to police, that his home near here was burned last August 16 to collect $4,000 insurance.

Police said Robert Frary denied knowledge of such an arson plot, but that his uncle's confession had implicated him. The elder Frary signed an agreement recently to settle the insurance claim for $2,500, officers said, but the money has not been paid.

Los Angeles, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Charles Gerard Conn, 86, former member of Congress from Indiana, died today after an illness of two weeks, which began with a throat ailment.

Dead Man Hangs in Tree 40 Days to Await Burial

Toronto, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—For 40 days the body of Harry Jones, widely known prospector, hung in a high tree because his companions were determined to give it proper burial.

Jones drowned in November while trying to cross the ice of Lake Summit, in the Red Lake district. His comrades recognized the body next day, but could not carry it back to civilization because of thin ice.

So they hung it out of reach of wild beasts and waited for colder weather. Finally an airplane landed on the ice and carried it to a little cemetery at Sioux Lookout.

LIQUOR AMENDMENT IS HELD TO BE LEGAL

PLAN HIGH COURT PLEA

New York, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The eighteenth amendment was held to have been legally adopted in a decision today by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, ruling on a case in which the defense was the same as in the recent Sprague case in New Jersey, in which Federal Judge Clark held that the amendment had not been legally ratified.

The court of appeals affirmed the conviction of Louis E. Thibault, of Windsor, Vt., who was accused of possessing and selling two pints of whisky.

As in the Sprague case, counsel for the losing side announced today that appeal would be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Tenth Amendment Cited.

In each case counsel defending the accused person contended that after adoption of the tenth amendment, no amendment giving the National Government additional powers over the people or over their rights could be adopted except by the people in convention, or by their delegated representatives.

The eighteenth amendment, they contended, was not legally ratified by the States because it was approved by the legislatures instead of by State conventions gathered for the express purpose of considering it.

The court of appeals declared, in its decision today that "there has been a long acquiescence and approval of the method of proposing and ratifying amendments as followed in the case of the eighteenth amendment," the decision said.

"The Constitution was adopted in 1789. The first ten amendments were adopted in 1791. All, even the first ten amendments, were proposed and ratified in like manner to the eighteenth. Pursuant to Article 5 the alternative power was vested in the people, to be exercised by a choice of the members of the Legislatures of the several States, or the constitutional conventions, and by choice of representatives in Congress.

"If it is the will of the people to change by amendment the Constitution, the method in Article 5 was effective even after passage of the tenth amendment, Supreme Court cases referred to are authoritative and binding upon us. It follows that the defense interposed of unlawful ratification of the eighteenth amendment is without merit."

Fireman Killed, 4 Hurt In Baltimore Club Fire

Baltimore, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—One fireman was killed and four others were severely injured tonight fighting a fire that destroyed the three-story clubhouse of the Baltimore Country Club at Roland Park. The cause of the fire was not determined. Club officers were unable to estimate the damage. Three months ago today fire wrecked the south wing of the building.

The fireman killed was William Humpermark, who with four others was driven through a porch floor as the roof fell on them.

Poisoned Liquor Kills Former Army Officer

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—A man identified by police as George C. Bowen, graduate of West Point Military Academy and a guard on the Army football team of 1907, died here today after drinking what friends said he thought was liquor.

F. S. Merrell and Weldon Hitchcock, coworkers of Bowen, said Bowen told them he became ill after a drink he had taken. Bowen died of convulsions an hour later.

Chinese-Burmese Riots Kill 30 and Injure 200

London, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Advices to the Daily Mail from Rangoon state that 30 persons were killed and 200 injured in rioting between Chinese and Burmese today.

The communal strife is a continuation of that which began Saturday, with three killed and 25 wounded, while six were killed and 33 injured in fighting yesterday.

130 U. S. DRY AGENTS ASKED IN HOUSE BILL

CLARK RULING AGITATED

(Associated Press.)

A move to press 130 new Federal dry agents into immediate service reached the floor of the House yesterday, while the Supreme Court, a short distance away, was entertaining a petition that it postpone until April 15 its hearing of the New Jersey decision holding the eighteenth amendment invalid.

A little later the motion of Solicitor General Thacher that the widely publicized ruling of Federal Judge Clark be given the earliest possible hearing also was filed with the court.

Although the high tribunal deferred its answer to the conflicting pleas, probably until next Monday, it did move to settle a long-standing minor prohibition controversy. It ruled illegal the Federal dry raid upon the offices of the Go-Bart Importing Co., of New York, in June, 1929.

$543,370 Appropriation Asked.

Prohibition Director Woodcock's request for additional dry agents, to be put to work before July 1, was contained in the first deficiency bill reported to the House by its appropriations committee. The measure asked for $543,370 for prohibition and would put 257 additional prohibition workers in the field, approximately half of them agents.

At the same time it was disclosed that in Col. Woodcock's testimony before the appropriations committee he had announced 25 of these dry officers would be assigned to the New York district; 21 to the Illinois section, and 18 to the Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey area. The other 12 prohibition districts would draw smaller complements. The men would be the first of the 500 new agents Col. Woodcock has requested.

"Our organization right now is depleted in agents' places," he said. "We have about 1,400 today. That is probably a great deal short of what is a normal complement. • • • This 130 is the estimate of the number we can get in and get appointed."

Provides for Education.

The measure would provide $10,000 for prohibition education, to be conducted through monographs and pamphlets about conditions under the dry laws, prepared by a staff of research experts.

Acting as spokesman for the attorneys defending the Judge Clark decision, Frederic M. P. Pearse told the Supreme Court other engagements would prevent their appearing for at least three months.

At the same time he criticized, as incomplete, the brief filed by Solicitor General Thacher, contending the Government appeared to have assumed that the highest tribunal "is foreclosed from considering the points raised by us and favorably passed upon by the court below."

Mr. Pearse asserted the New Jersey decision apparently was not hampering enforcement of the prohibition law, and that the Government was exhibiting undue haste in bringing the matter before the Supreme Court.

Real Question Undecided.

He disclosed an effort would be made to show that the real question raised has never been passed upon by the court, as the Government contends, and that the prohibition amendment "was not proposed by Congress in the usual form," but constitutes "the only instance of such a proposal."

In passing upon the Go-Bart Co. dry raid, the Supreme Court ordered that papers seized be returned to the company, ruling that they could not be used as evidence against the two officers of the company charged with violating the dry law.

The Government argument conceded the warrant on which the raid was made was illegal, but contended dry agents had sufficient evidence to sustain the arrest of Philip D. Gowan and William Bartels, officers of the company.

Inventor Sought In Letter Threats

Owen D. Young Given Guard; Dr. Fosdick Refuses Protection.

New York, Jan. 5. (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Police tonight were searching for an inventor and former radio dealer as the writer of threatening letters received not only by Owen D. Young, chairman of the boards of the General Electric Corporation and the Radio Corporation of America, but by Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of the Riverside Baptist Church, as well.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney admitted today that a bodyguard had been in attendance on Mr. Young since the letters had been called to the attention of police. Dr. Fosdick, it was learned, has refused offers of police protection, but the church, with its famous carillon chimes, has been carefully guarded.

Mr. Young refused any comment today, but police said the series of threatening letters to Dr. Fosdick and Mr. Young came apparently from the same man, described as a disappointed inventor, who claims he conceived the idea back of one of the phonographs owned by the Radio Corporation of America.

PACKERS' RESTRAINT LOOSENED BY COURT

FARM BOARD APPROVES

(Associated Press.)

The legal restraint placed on the large packing groups by the Government was loosened yesterday in the District of Columbia Supreme Court to allow them to manufacture and sell at wholesale virtually all classes of food.

The packers also sought permission to sell their products at retail, but this was denied by Justice Jennings Bailey. He also left intact that part of the decree which prohibited them from having an interest in stock yards, terminal railroads and market periodicals.

The Government in 1920 charged the Armour, Swift, Wilson, Morris and Cudahy packing companies with a virtual monopoly of the meat market and began court action, which was dropped when the packers agreed to confine themselves almost exclusively to handling meat.

They have been trying to get the decree lifted or modified since. The decision was regarded by officials of Armour and Swift as enabling them to contribute to the modern trend of reducing distribution costs.

Beneficial, Packer Heads Say.

F. Edson White, president of Armour, and Louis F. Swift, president of Swift & Co., in Chicago said they looked upon the decision as beneficial to the public as well as their companies.

There was no indication of the course the Government would take, but active dissatisfaction with the opinion was expressed by J. H. McLurin, president of the American Wholesale Grocers Association. This organization and the National Wholesale Grocers Association had intervened in opposition to modifying the decree.

Justice Bailey, in his opinion, said if the packers were given permission to sell at retail it might result in driving out of business the few independent grocers left. His ruling, however, allowed the packing groups to use all their facilities such as freight and refrigerator cars and branch plants in putting their products into retail stores, but there they must stop.

Regret From Stone.

Regret that the ruling did not permit the retailing of meat was expressed by James C. Stone, vice chairman of the Farm Board. Had the packers been permitted to retail meat products, Stone added, "I believe it would have helped the retail price of meat considerably." While the Farm Board at no time acted officially, when the decision was pending, Chairman Legge said the members unanimously favored a revision permitting the retailing of meat products.

Paroled Prisoners Returning to Cells

Convicts Given 15-Day Holiday Keep Faith With Governor.

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Keeping faith with Gov. Bibb Graves, more than 300 prisoners tonight were either back in the State prisons or en route to them.

Rewarded for meritorious conduct with a fifteen-day parole over Christmas, the convicts were checking back in at Kilby, Speigner, Atmore, the Wetumpka Women's Prison and the road camps.

Life termers with as much as 20 years of penal servitude behind them and scores facing long years in prison for other offenses checked in today and prison officials tonight said they expected practically all of them back on time.

The paroles end tomorrow at 6 p. m., but more than half of the 43 who went out from Kilby Prison here were back by midafternoon.

"There may be two out of the group that won't return," said Deputy Warden Frank Boswell, "but the rest will be here and on time."

Plea of Self-Defense Wins in Killing Trial

Special to The Washington Post.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 5.—Henry L. Wood, 30, who resides near Harpers Ferry, in Loudoun County, was acquitted tonight by a circuit court jury of the slaying of Edward Cogle, also of Loudoun County, on August 8 last. The jury deliberated only fifteen minutes.

Wood's counsel maintained that he had killed Cogle in self-defense while attempting to repulse an attack on Wood's wife.

SIX DEAD AS STORM HITS FOUR STATES

Va., said he ran into the edge of the storm as he was driving toward Yanceyville. He described his experiences as follows:

"I was going to town from Danville this afternoon about 3:30 o'clock when I ran into a terrific windstorm. I saw the top of a house blown away and part of the roof was hurled across the road a short distance in front of me. The wind was so strong and the leaves so dense in accumulating on the windshield I had to stop. It felt like the wind would blow the car off the road.

"I saw the wind literally twist off and tear up trees by the roots. Some of them were 12 inches in diameter. I could see roofs blowing through the air. One roof was blown about 100 yards.

"It lasted about three minutes.

"The noise was like the roaring of a fleet of airplanes. The air was full of small branches, leaves, small pieces of wood and tobacco blown out of barns. A rock weighing 10 pounds or more was blown off a building to a distance of 15 or 20 yards."

Cloudless skies and fair weather again are in store for Washington today, after 24 hours of the first thorough rain this section has had in weeks.

Weather Bureau authorities forecast a slight drop in the temperature overnight. The mercury will hover around 40 degrees this morning, rising slowly during the day, the bureau stated.

Westerly and northwesterly winds will spring up during the day. The clear weather will continue through tomorrow, at least, last night's forecast stated.

New Indictments Charge Huge Liquor Plots Here

Washington and Philadelphia Merchants Alleged to Have Conspired to Bring Disinfectants and Deodorants for Conversion Into "Gin."

The District grand jury yesterday delivered a severe blow at alleged liquor traffic in Washington when it returned two indictments charging conspiracy to violate the prohibition act and nine indictments charging violation of the Jones "5-and-10" law.

One of the conspiracy indictments charges conspiracy among twenty-one persons, the other names six alleged conspirators, while the Jones law indictments charge eleven individuals. The total is the largest number ever accused in connection with liquor violations locally.

Washington and Philadelphia merchants and alleged bootleggers are cited in the two conspiracy indictments.

In one case the indictment alleges that a large quantity of perfume was brought to Washington from Philadelphia and sold locally to still operators. These later in turn are alleged to have sold the redistilled alcohol to bootleggers. They in turn are said to have converted the liquid into synthetic gin which in turn was retailed.

In the other conspiracy case it is charged that an attempt was made to bring disinfectants and deodorants, containing 92 per cent of alcohol, to Washington. This stuff, in 18 barrels, was seized in Philadelphia, but the Government alleges it was designed to reach the Washington drinking public through the same channels.

Jacob Goldstein, said to trade under the name of the Garwood Co., in Philadelphia; Nathan Glanneberg, James Kanter, Robert King, Harry Kushner and Robert Simpson, all of Washington, are named in the indictment in connection with the disinfectants and deodorants.

The "perfume" indictment cites Goldstein, Charles English, Harry Seigel, Kanter, King, Simpson, Milton Lerner, Kushner, Dora Kushner, James Clarence Clarke, Lila Clarke, Max Sklar, Carl Smith, Marion Smith, Hardee Wilson Barham, Belle A. Behrens, Louis Frederick Behrens, Russell Printz, Reginald Marion Mann, Ernest Jack Pirrone and Julius Sanders.

Trachtenberg and Mullen are alleged to have sold liquor to Reuben Nichols from an automobile at Rhode Island avenue and Tenth street last November 5.

Trachtenberg was recently in the public eye in connection with an alleged assault on Policeman Vance V. Vaughn. Shortly afterward he was charged in a warrant with counterfeiting in Maryland, but escaped return to Baltimore when he proved he was in Atlantic City, N. J., and not in Maryland on the date charged in the warrant.

GRAND JURY FREES MULLEN IN SLAYING

SHOOTING HELD MISHAP

Hale was shot while he, Mullen and Mrs. Margaret M. Rousseau and Miss Margaret C. Scotson, the latter of Church street northwest, near Eighteenth street, were engaged in the card party.

Mullen told police that he was holding the gun when it exploded accidentally. The bullet plowed through Hale's heart, producing almost instant death. Mullen also admitted that the .32-caliber pistol which figured in the shooting belonged to him.

John H. Rousseau, husband of Mrs. Rousseau, was playing in the Shoreham Hotel Orchestra at the time of the shooting. He told police, however, that previously Mullen had told him of the possession of two guns and that at his request the accused man had brought the guns to his apartment on the night of the shooting. Rousseau said he had expressed a desire to see the guns, and that just before he left for the hotel he had viewed them and believed they were unloaded.

Third of Car Tags Already Given Out

The rush for 1931 license tags at the District Building and at the headquarters of the American Automobile Association will be over by the end of this week, is was indicated yesterday when Wade S. Coombs, head of the License Bureau, announced that practically a third of the estimated 105,000 plates had been distributed up to last night.

Approximately 7,000 tags were issued yesterday, bringing the total to about 39,000, according to Mr. Coombs. When business closed Saturday night, it was figured yesterday, 32,000 tags had been sold, but 20,000 of these had been previously distributed through Government channels.

The lines of applicants were considerably shorter yesterday, but there was still a steady distribution from 8:30 a. m. to 4 p. m. All motorists must possess the new licenses by January 17, or be subject to arrest.

This was the largest amount ever contributed in one year by the school, practically every member of whom is an employe of the institution.

HEARINGS ON BILL BEGIN

Proposed school and Fire Department sites will be inspected this morning by the House District appropriations subcommittee, of which Representative Robert G. Simmons (Republican), of Nebraska, is chairman.

The inspection will be made in an effort to get first hand knowledge of items included in the annual District appropriations bill on which hearings were begun in the Capitol yesterday afternoon.

The trip is expected to occupy the morning and the committee will resume its executive hearings on the bill at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Another inspection trip will be made later to see what is involved in the estimates for street improvements. Maj. JohnC. Gotwals, Engineer Commissioner, will accompany the committee today.

Hearings on the bill began yesterday afternoon. The morning was taken up with a meeting of the full subcommittee. The case of the District, in justification of the estimates, was outlined in a preliminary statement read to the subcommittee by Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, president of the Board of Commissioners. The Commissioners, Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, and George M. Roberts, superintendent of weights and measures, were heard.

A total of $47,796,047 is carried in the estimates for next year, to which sum is expected to be added a request for $1,500,000 to provide for beginning construction of the Municipal Center.

Hearings on appropriations bills are conducted in executive session, behind closed doors, and details are not made public until hearings have been completed and printed in a report, and the measure submitted to the House for formal consideration. Hearings on the District bill are expected to occupy about two weeks.

Carnell's Mother Cleared In Slaying of Louis Bush

Sarah Margaret Sullivan, who was held as an accessory after the fact of murder in connection with the death of Louis Bush, bus magnate, was formally cleared yesterday when the grand jury reported that the case against her had been ignored.

The woman is the mother of William J. Carnell, who, with Frank Mahoney, were convicted recently by a District Supreme Court jury on a charge of second-degree murder in connection with the death of Mr. Bush. She was held as a witness, but was released just before the jury's verdict was returned.

Carnell and Mahoney have not as yet been sentenced, but it is believed they will be brought into court this week. Justice Peyton Gordon, who presided, will pass sentence, which can range from 20 years to life.

Mr. Bush died from a gunshot wound inflicted during a struggle with Carnell in the garage in the rear of his home last October.

Carnell's mother is alleged to have told the police that on the night Mr. Bush was fatally injured her son had spent the night at her home and had threatened her if she made any statement.

HIGGINS IS INDICTED ON THREE CHARGES

33 OTHER BILLS FOUND

Winding up its work for the last three months of 1930 the October term grand jury yesterday returned 36 indictments and reported that nine cases had been ignored. Robbery and liquor charges featured the report, although a variety of other accusations also was made.

Thomas J. Higgins, the youthful white man who startled police by admitting more than a dozen holdups, was indicted on two charges of robbery and one charge of assault with intent to commit robbery.

Higgins, whose career included two robberies in which he made a driver of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. assist him, was captured by a taxicab driver who persuaded Higgins not to rob him but to permit him to aid in the holdups. Higgins agreed and the cab driver leaving the youth temporarily called police who easily trapped the young bandit.

More Charges to Jury.

Assistant United States Attorney Julian I. Richards intimated that additional charges against Higgins will be presented to the new grand jury which goes into office tomorrow.

One of the indictments returned yesterday charges that Higgins held up a gasoline filling station on Central avenue northeast near Benning road on November 22 and took $46.16 from W. H. Limerick.

The other robbery indictment charges Higgins with holding up the gasoline filling station at Florida avenue and W street northwest on November 22, when he is alleged to have stolen $18 from Thomas P. Berry.

The assault with intent to rob charge is based on the alleged attempt which resulted in the youth's capture. It charges Higgins tried to hold up Bert A. Ayers, the taxicab driver, in front of 1407 Decatur street northwest.

Taxicab Was Stolen.

Edward Bunch was indicted on a charge of robbery in connection with the holdup of Sherman Wiley, taxicab driver, in Soldiers' Home grounds on December 10. He is alleged to have taken the cab, valued at $500, and $9.65 from Wiley.

Charges that they held up David N. Potts at a filling station at 720 Rhode Island avenue northeast on December 20 are contained in an indictment returned against John B. Taylor, William C. Anthony and Lester P. Hockman. They are said to have obtained $8.65.

Marshall Washington, Howard Hawkins and Anderson Talley, all colored, were indicted on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Shot at Policeman, Charged.

They are alleged to have fired at Policemen Conner H. Gould and Charles A. Cartmill, of the Second Precinct, at 2 o'clock on the morning of December 19. The policemen were chasing the Negroes in an automobile at the time, according to records in the case.

Sarah Carter, Negress, was charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of James Statesman, also colored, last December 20 at a house on O street northwest, near First street. Statesman was stabbed to death.

Mrs. Lynn Marshall Cook, 35 years old, was named in a true bill charging forgery and uttering in connection with narcotic prescriptions. She is said to have forged the name of a doctor to two prescriptions for morphine, which were filled in local drug stores on September 9 and 10.

Bolivia Thwarts Plot of Rebels

Interception of Messages Leads to Uncovering of Plans.

La Paz, Bolivia, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The government announced today it had thwarted a revolutionary plot scheduled to break out on the eve of the national elections, which were held yesterday.

It was charged the conspiracy was headed by Col. Ayora and Col. Toro, but certain telegraphic communications between them aroused the suspicion of police in the town of Villazon. This led to the search of a house occupied by two men mentioned in the telegrams and the plot was uncovered.

The commander of the military garrison at Villazon reported a man named Poklepovic was in charge of the movement in that town and was closely in touch with Col. Ayora, now in Buenos Aires.

Alcoholism Is Blamed For One of Two Deaths

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Acute alcoholism was blamed for one of two deaths here over the week-end and police are investigating the other.

John Gettys, 38, of Roanoke, was found dead yesterday. Police said there was a bottle of denatured alcohol nearby. Lena Martin, 28, alias Margaret Miller, died suddenly Saturday night under circumstances which officers said indicated alcoholism was responsible. Claude Larch, 30, who is said to have been the woman's companion, has been charged with murder and released under $3,000 bond.

Woman Hurt by Auto.

Mrs. Fanny Brooks, 78, of 1712 Seventeenth street northwest, suffered lacerations of the scalp when she was struck by an auto yesterday afternoon at Tenth and H streets northwest. According to police, she was struck by Wilmont Oliff, of T street near Second northeast. A taxicab driver took the woman to Emergency Hospital.

LONG LIFE ENDS

MRS. EMMA P. N. HUME.

ASSESSMENT OF CITY TO BE $1,231,000,000

APPEALS DUE BY JUNE 1

Tax assessments for the fiscal year 1932 will not exceed $1,231,000,000 and will represent an increase of probably less than half of this year's gain over the previous fiscal year, William P. Richards, District tax assessor, announced yesterday as the next year assessment was completed.

The total assessment for 1930 was $1,182,000,000, while for 1931 it jumped to $1,211,000,000, an increase of $29,000,000. Fewer large buildings have been erected in the past year, Mr. Richards said, and those built have cost less than in previous year because of the lower prices in building materials. Only two large apartment houses are now under construction, he pointed out, whereas last year at this time there were at least six.

With the exception of the Northwest section west of Rock Creek, no increases in land values have been made in the suburban area, according to the tax assessor, while those in the downtown section have been negligible.

For the first time the assessments entered in 91 field books, include those of the two previous years so that a property holder can determine at a glance what the increase, if any, has been. The books are now open to the public.

The Board of Equalization and Review will hold sessions daily on appeals from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. All appeals by aggrieved property owners must be filed in writing and under oath before the first Monday in June (June 1). The present assessment, when approved by the District Commissioners, will be the basis for realty taxes to be collected in September, 1931, and March, 1932, on the tax rate to be set by the Commissioners.

The Equalization Board consists of Mr. Richards, F. D. Allen, L. S. Johnston, D. A. Edwards, Lloyd P. Gaines, C. A. Russell, John T. Bardoff, F. A. Gunther, A. Willinge and Edward B. Fletcher.

Wales Coal Fields Disorder Is Feared

Communists Are Active as Peace Conference Is Planned.

London, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Soap box orators were talking communism in the South Wales coal fields today and it became obvious there was grave danger of disorder among the 140,000 miners, idle since New Year's Day because of wage disputes with the mine owners.

Their spokesmen conferred here today with Emmanuel Shinwell, the minister of mines, and William Graham, president of the board of trade, who later talked things over with Ramsay MacDonald and issued an invitation to the owners to come here for a meeting tomorrow. The owners accepted and both sides agree that unless some compromise comes out of this meeting hopes for peace in the industry are slim indeed.

No official statement came out of today's conference, but it was generally believed the miners had reiterated their suggestion the government take over the pits and run them temporarily as it did in the war days.

STORM AGAIN HALTS OCEAN FLIGHT PLAN

FUNDS PROBLEM SOLVED

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieut. William S. MacLaren said tonight they had delayed resumption of their "pay load" flight to Paris, via Bermuda and the Azores, until Wednesday morning because of a storm reported up and down the Atlantic seaboard.

Their monoplane Tradewind was in readiness to hop off at 8 a. m. tomorrow and they had announced plans for starting at that time. Later weather reports advised, however, that the storm which started this morning, had not abated. They believe that by Wednesday it will be spent.

Lieut. MacLaren said the plane's tanks were filled this afternoon and the motor was in tune for the jump whenever the skies clear.

They plan to resume the flight at 6 a. m. on Wednesday, when planes of the carrier division of the scouting fleet begin their annual southward journey.

The Tradewind has been at the Hampton Roads Naval Air Station since Saturday night when it turned back from Bermuda because of damaged navigating equipment and the weather. The flight was further delayed today awaiting payment for repairs to the damaged sextant, since adjusted, and by adverse weather.

Gas Lines Serving Montgomery Hit

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 5.—Efforts to prove the Maryland Gas Transmission Corporation is conducting local, rather than wholesale, transactions in natural gas in this State were made today at a public hearing by John Henry Lewin, people's counsel.

The hearing, which will be resumed tomorrow morning, was opened today at the offices of the Public Service Commission to determine whether the transmission company's operations falls under the jurisdiction of the regulatory body. The company, a subsidiary of the Columbia Gas Light Co., has constructed mains across the State for the purpose of transmitting natural gas from the South.

John G. Pew, vice president of the transmission company and also of the Columbia company, was the only witness to take the stand today. Mr. Pew testified that negotiations with the Consolidated Gas Electric Light & Power Co. for distribution of natural gas by that company in Baltimore and Howard Counties almost had reached their conclusion.

Two other companies, the Chesapeake Gas Co. and the Patuxent Gas Co., have negotiated to distribute the gas to land owners along the pipe line in Montgomery, Harford and Cecil Counties. Mr. Lewin said the Chesapeake and Patuxent Gas companies were "clever expedients" by which the transmission company might fulfill its agreement to some of the property owners along it's line without coming under the jurisdiction of the commission.

Alleged Tear Gas Bomber Arraigned

Dietz Is Charged With Strange Attack on Taxicab Driver.

William Dietz, 32 years old, was arraigned in Police Court yesterday on two charges of concealed weapons and a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon in connection with the shooting of a tear gas bomb into the face of Stephen W. Kendricks, a taxicab driver, of I street northeast, near Sixth street, last Saturday at North Capitol and P streets.

Dietz was ordered held for hearing next Monday under $2,000 bond. Assistant United States Attorney Michael F. Keough explaining that the condition of the cab driver had not been determined.

Kendricks was shot with the tear gas shell during the course of an argument with Dietz as to the amount of a fare, according to police. Dietz was arrested shortly afterward, and is said to have dropped a .38-caliber revolver and a large and a small tear gas gun.

HOUSE GROUP PLANS BORLAND LAW QUIZ

Traffic Acts Also to Come Up at Hearing Set for This Morning.

OFFICIALS WILL TESTIFY

The new Borland and traffic laws for the District are to be considered at a public hearing before the House District subcommittee on streets, avenues and traffic beginning at 10 o'clock this morning.

Announcement of the hearing was made yesterday by Representative Gale H. Stalker (Republican), of New York, chairman of the subcommittee.

The proposed new Borland law, submitted by the District Commissioners, also will be the subject of a public hearing to be held by the Senate District committee at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Considerable discussion of the merits of the measures is expected at both hearings. The District Commissioners, Capt. Herbert C. Whitehurst, engineer of highways, who aided in drafting the proposed new street assessment law; William W. Bride, corporation counsel, and other District officials have been invited to attend both hearings.

Both bills have been described by the District Commissioners in messages to the House and Senate committees as of such importance as to demand action at the present session.

The meeting of the House subcommittee, of which Representative Stalker is chairman, will be the first meeting of a House District subcommittee this session. The full committee is yet to have a meeting.

Representative Clarence McLeod (Republican), of Michigan, ranking majority member of the committee, who was acting chairman last session, is to conduct the business of the committee this session. Mr. McLeod is expected to return to Washington today or tomorrow.

Fractured Skull Kills G. L. Eppler

Baltimore Police Investigate Report State Official Beaten and Robbed.

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 5.—George Louis Eppler, 48, State senator from Allegany County in the sessions of 1918-20 and Republican or minority member of the State Industrial Accident Commission since 1920, who died from a fractured skull and pneumonia at Mercy Hospital, Baltimore, early today, will be buried from the home of his mother, Mrs. William F. Eppler, this city, at a time to be announced. In the meantime the Baltimore authorities are investigating a report that Eppler suffered injury in a Chinese restaurant New Year's Day and that his watch and ring were missing.

Mr. Eppler was a graduate of Gettysburg College and the University of Maryland Law School. He was recognized as one of the country's leading authorities on workmen's compensation. One of his outstanding achievements was his effort in behalf of a bill in 1920 which resulted in the appointment of a commission by Gov. Ritchie to work out a satisfactory mining statute.

Tallahassee Publisher Succumbs in Georgia

He was a Confederate veteran and served his apprenticeship in Richmond, Va., before and after the war between the States.

Airport License Transfer Sought.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The Washington Airport, Inc., and the Washington Flying Service, Inc., today applied to the Virginia State Corporation Commission for authority to transfer the license of the latter organization to the Washington Airport. A hearing will be held by the commission on January 13.

Banker Refused Food At Depot He Assisted

New York, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—E. F. Hutton, banker, who gave $50,000 to establish a free emergency food depot for New York City's unemployed, decided he would like to have a look at the place.

He directed the taxi driver to stop across the street, got out and walked over. The driver watched him enter, leaped out of his car and followed Mr. Hutton through the door.

"Hey!" the taximan barked at the Salvation Army worker inside. "Don't give that fellow anything to eat! He's got money. He took a cab down here!"

They didn't.

JOBLESS AID TAXES CATHOLIC CHARITIES

MANY FAMILIES HELPED

District unemployment conditions in 1930 taxed the Catholic Charities with an increase in relief expenditures of nearly 25 per cent over those for 1929, the Rev. Laurence Sheehan, assistant director, announced yesterday.

In 1929, 1,070 families were aided at a cost of $32,528.25. In 1930 approximately 1,200 families were helped, the total amount spent for relief reaching $41,285.10.

"In normal times," said Father Sheehan, "our chief concern is with the very young, the very old, the handicapped and those otherwise dependent, but this year we have had to support entire families simply because the breadwinners were out of work through no fault of their own."

He described the plight of a certain family in which there were eleven children, all under 16. The father had been out of work for six months. Finally the Catholic Charities succeeded in finding him a job at the inadequate salary of $18 a week.

"Temporary jobs over the holidays have not reduced the needs particularly," said Father Sheehan. "We have one family of father, mother and four children under our care. The father is an unskilled laborer, but he had been out of work for eight months, until he was given a temporary job in the Postoffice Department over the holiday season. That is now finished and he is again making the rounds in search of something to do."

Man Ground to Death Underneath Car Wheels

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 5.—Confused when the whistle blew a warning to him, Albert Bias, 48, chemical worker at Ziesing, stepped directly in front of a moving interurban traction car there last night and was ground to death beneath its wheels.

He leaves a widow and five children.

LAME DUCK IS URGED FOR DISTRICT COURT

AUKAM IS REAPPOINTED

President Hoover, it was learned yesterday, is being urged to appoint a congressional lame duck from the Middle West to a judgeship in the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

He is F. Dickinson Letts (Republican), of Iowa, who was defeated for reelection in November. Prominent among those who are trying to get him the local judgeship is Representative L. J. Dickinson, of the same State, who was elected to the Senate in November.

The job to which Letts aspires will become vacant as soon as the Senate confirms the nomination of Justice William Hitz for the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

Justice Hitz, who is now in the local Supreme Court, was nominated for the Court of Appeals yesterday, along with Federal Judge D. Lawrence Groner, of Norfolk.

The President at the same time nominated Judge George C. Aukam for another term in the Municipal Court.

Local Republicans and the local Bar Association have been hoping that President Hoover will not use the vacancy in the District Supreme Court for political purposes, but will instead award it to James M. Proctor, a local attorney, who has been widely indorsed for the post.

The nominations which President Hoover sent to the Senate yesterday are expected to be confirmed at an early date. Justice Hitz is a Democrat and Judge Groner a Republican.

Congestion Delays Retrial of Bradys

Anne Arundel Prosecutor Unable to Set Date in Murder Case.

Because the Anne Arundel County Circuit Court is still engaged in trying its criminal calendar, no date has been set for the trial of Herman and Leroy Brady, charged with killing three persons through the explosion of a bomb. Theodore A. Brady, county prosecutor in Annapolis, told Prince Georges officials yesterday that he would notify opposing counsel when they could meet with the court and set a date for the trial.

One trial has already been held in Rockville on a change of venue, and resulted in a mistrial. So great was the interest there that another change of venue, to Annapolis, was asked and granted. The bomb killed Herman's bride and two others of her family when it exploded last New Year's Day. Several others were injured.

It appears likely that J. Frank Parran, county prosecutor of Prince Georges during the Rockville trial, will be assigned by the court to assist in the Annapolis prosecution, although he has been supplanted as State's attorney by Alan Bowie, winner of the last election. Bowie was sworn into office yesterday by Judge Joseph C. Mattingly, of the circuit court.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Home for Sad Anniversary

Widow of Former President Returns to Sagamore Hill From Visit to Son, in Porto Rico, to Follow Custom of Years.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—To carry out a custom she has observed ever since her husband's death, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt returned today to Sagamore Hill from San Juan, where she spent Christmas with her son, Theodore Roosevelt, jr., governor of Porto Rico.

Twelve years ago tomorrow Theodore Roosevelt died, and his widow has spent each anniversary at the home which all through his public life formed a quiet background for his vigorous personality. On many occasions she received the pilgrims who journed on that day to his grave.

In the twelve years which have passed since that snowy day when he was laid to rest, Oyster Bay neighbors have seen a remarkable transformation in the cemetery where the former President is buried.

His grave is at the top of a knoll across the road from Sagamore Hill, surrounded by some 50 other graves of pioneers. When the former President was buried there was not even a footpath to the top of the little hill. Soon a small footpath was worn, then a wide one, and now a broad way goes up to the crest. It was found necessary at length to build timber steps into the side of the hill.

Never a day passes that some pilgrim does not pause at the Roosevelt grave. On some summer days as many as 8,000 persons have been there.

Recently a description of Sagamore Hill from the late President's own pen came to light.

"At Sagamore Hill," he wrote, "we love a great many things—birds and trees and books and all things beautiful, and horses and children and hard work and the joy of life. We have great fireplaces, and in them logs roar and crackle during the long winter evenings.

"The house stands right on top of the hill, separated by fields and belts of woodland from all other houses, and looks out over the bay and the sound. We see the sun go down beyond long reaches of land and water, many birds dwell in the trees round the house or in the pastures and the woods nearby, and of, course, in winter gulls, loons and wild fowl frequent the waters of the bay and sound.

"We love all the seasons; the snow and bare woods of winter; the rush of growing things and the blossom spray of spring; the yellow grain, the ripening fruits and tasseled corn, the deep leafy shades that are heralded by the green dance of summer, and the sharp fall winds that tear the brilliant banners with which the trees greet the dying year."

CUBAN RATIFICATION GIVEN TO PROTOCOL

Two Reservations Likely to Delay Effectiveness of Agreement.

DOCUMENT IS DEPOSITED

Geneva, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Cuba's ratification of the protocol for revision of the World Court statute was deposited with the League of Nations secretariat today by Guillermo de Blanck, Cuban representative at Geneva, who signed the protocol Saturday.

Thus is removed one obstacle to legalization of the new statute, but, in ratifying, Cuba notified the league of two reservations which will at least tend to delay its becoming effective.

The first reservation is to article 4 of the protocol, which provides for its becoming effective, by agreement, before the ratification of all members of the court are obtained. The second reservation amounts to an objection to keeping the court permanently in session, thus requiring the judges to reside at The Hague.

These reservations must be sent to all signatories of the protocol, to determine if they are acceptable to them. Even if all accept, the procedure will inevitably require a long period of time.

Moreover, many members of the court have not yet ratified the revision of the protocol, although they have made known their willingness to have it come into effect. Cuba's first reservation makes it necessary that all members ratify, before the revised statute becomes effective.

South Carolinian Dies In Virginia Auto Crash

Danville, Va., Jan. 5.—J. B. Irby, aged 38, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co., at Chester, S. C., was instantly killed this morning at 10 o'clock when his car overturned near Alta Vista, in Campbell County. His car skidded 30 feet and then slid across the road, overturning and pinning him underneath.

Shortly before the accident he had passed a filling station at a rate of speed which caused comment. Irby had been spending the week-end in Lynchburg.

Fairfax Governors Reject Ball Plan

Supervisors Vote Against Creation of Park Board for North Virginia.

The Fairfax County board of supervisors held its semiannual meeting yesterday and refused the request of a committee from the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce to adopt the Ball planning and zoning law. This bill, passed by the State Legislature, provided for the establishment of a park and planning commission for northern Virginia. The commission would be composed of one person appointed from Arlington and Fairfax Counties and from the City of Alexandria by their respective governing bodies, and two members from each political subdivision, to be appointed by the Governor of Virginia. The expenses of the board were to be borne pro rata, according to their assessed valuation, by the two counties and Alexandria.

The committee from the Chamber of Commerce was composed of W. S. Hoge, jr., George F. Harrison, of Herndon, and Edward C. Gibbs, of Mount Vernon. They urged the appointment of a legally created body to handel all zoning matters and to work with the National Park and Planning Commission for the establishment of parks and highways throughout northern Virginia, especially concerning the establishment of the George Washington Memorial Parkway along the Potomac River, from Great Falls to Mount Vernon.

Brother Sues Star On Slander Charge

Victor McLaglen Accused of Ruining Opportunities for Relative.

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The parting of the ways has come for the McLaglen brothers. The climax of their struggles was reached today after one had climbed to motion picture stardom, while the other remained at the bottom.

In a suit asking damage of $90,000 for alleged slander and defamation of character, Capt Leopold McLaglen accused Victor McLaglen, popular star, of ruining his film career.

Leopold, in his suit, said both enjoyed equal success in films in England. Victor came to Hollywood and Leopold went to Australia. On Leopold's arrival here, the suit alleged, Victor warned him: "There's room for only one McLaglen in Hollywood—that's I." Leopold said a series of verbal attacks on his character were made by Victor at intervals, in which he was pictured as a scapegoat and he was unable to gain a foothold in any studio.

Senate May Make Sasscer President

Prince Georges Representative Considered for High Maryland Post.

Prince Georges County's representative in the State Senate is seen as president of that body during the term which starts tomorrow. Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer is near the top of the list of notables in point of seniority.

Walter M. Mitchell, senator from Charles County, has more experience at Annapolis than Sasscer, but the Charles County election has been contested by Thomas B. R. Mudd, the Republican candidate. If Mitchell is chosen he will be placed in the difficult position of having to appoint the committee which will pass on his right to a seat in that body.

Only 24 votes separated Mudd and Mitchell. Fraud has been charged in the election. The committee on elections selected by the president of the Senate would pass on the legality of Mitchell's admission as senator. To forestall possible criticism of this action, some hold he and his backers will not press his claims to the presidency.

David G. McIntosh, jr., is another man discussed for the post. He held it during the last session. McIntosh, however, filed for governor during the primaries to the last election, and his friends at that time said he would not seek to head the Senate again. Later McIntosh withdrew, and threw all his weight to Gov. Ritchie. Some hold that his withdrawal nullifies his renunciation of the president's chair in the State House.

OATH ADMINISTERED TO NEW PROSECUTOR

TWO YOUTHS ARRESTED

Stedman Prescott, Rockville lawyer, yesterday was administered the oath of office as State's attorney for Montgomery County by Preston B. Ray, clerk of the Circuit Court. He succeeds State's Attorney Robert B. Peter, jr., also of Rockville.

Mr. Prescott will retain his present stenographer, Mrs. Robert Howes, of Rockville, as secretary to the State's attorney. He moved into the office provided for the State's attorney, in the courthouse building, yesterday.

Former State's Attorney Robert Peter, jr., has opened his offices for private practice in the Kingdon Building, which faces on courthouse square. He is the son of Judge Robert B. Peter, of the Circuit Court at Rockville, in whose footsteps he has followed as State's attorney of the county. His father before him made a distinguished record as State's attorney, and "young Bob," as he is known to most residents, also has achieved a very good record in the office. At the last term of court he won all save three cases that he tried.

The new State's attorney also is popular and his ability as a lawyer is conceded, even by his political enemies. He is expected to maintain the high standard of the office to which he has been elected.

Charles J. Maddox has assumed the office of county surveyor. He moved into the courthouse yesterday. He succeeds Joseph N. Starkey, who has moved into the office vacated by State's Attorney Prescott, next to the Rockville firehouse.

Two Silver Spring youths were arrested yesterday by Montgomery County police on charges of hold-up and robbery. They gave their names as Everett Chandler, 19 years old, and Maxwell Cave, 23, both of Silver Spring. The youths were arrested by Sergt. Guy L. Jones and Policemen Charles Barnes, Joseph Nolte and Lee Jones. The policemen recovered the money alleged to have been stolen.

Th youths are said by police to have confessed to having held up and robbed Ranie Kirkman, a granite worker, of 1003 New Hampshire avenue northwest. According to the story told police, they offered him a ride to the street car line from Silver Spring and on the way took $29 from him at the point of a pistol, then forcing him onto the roadway near Takoma Park.

Twelve valuable cattle belonging to Walter Mobley, of Derwood, were killed early yesterday morning by a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad train which passed near his farm. A herd of 22 cattle escaped from the farm and wandered onto the railroad tracks. The twelve were found mangled yesterday by a farm hand. It is thought possible that the cattle were killed by more than one train.

Judge Kathryn B. Sellers, of the District of Columbia Juvenile Court, will address a meeting of the Woodside Parent-Teacher Association tonight in the school. She will talk on the problems of the Juvenile Court and especially the problems which Montgomery County will encounter in establishing such a tribunal.

Funeral services for Edmund P. B. Margerum, 69 years old, of Colesville District, Montgomery County, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the Methodist Church at Burtonsville. Interment will be in Union Cemetery, at that place.

Mr. Margerum was born in Pennsylvania, but had resided in Montgomery County many years and had held positions as justice of the peace much of the time. Mr. Margerum was one of the best-known farmers in the county. He had been ill for a long time, and the illness became critical Friday night. He is survived by his widow, a daughter by a former marriage, Mrs. Anna Johnson, of Rockville, and six stepchildren. Mr. Margerum also leaves two brothers, Franklin Margerum, of Spencerville, and Albert Margerum, of Bustleton, Pa.

U. S. Dredge Sunk; 57 Men Are Saved

Savannah Liner Crashes Into Boat in New York Fog; Rescues Exciting.

New York, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—In an early morning haze that hung over the entrance to New York Harbor, the United States Army dredge Raritan was sunk today by the Savannah liner City of Montgomery. The Army boat went down in eleven minutes but the 57 officers and men aboard were saved.

The loss of the Raritan was estimated at $191,000, but Army officials said she would cost $1,000,000 to replace. The liner's bow was deeply dented at the water line, but she was able to make her pier unassisted. Capt. John Peterson, commander of the dredge, was slightly injured.

The fact that no lives were lost probably was due to the timely warning given by Samuel F. Watts, of Southport, N. C., third mate of the Raritan. He was on the bridge and when he saw a collision was inevitable he ordered the boats manned.

Capt. Bertram H. Garfield, of the City of Montgomery, said there was no excitement among the liner's 38 passengers.

Alma Rubens Arrested Upon Narcotics Charge

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Alma Rubens, former motion picture actress, was arrested by police today on a charge of violation of the State poison act.

Police officers searched the hotel room occupied by the former star and declared they found a quantity of narcotics, valued at approximately $5,000, in the lining of an evening dress said to belong to Miss Rubens. Pending the fixing of bail Miss Rubens was ordered held in the city jail.

NO FEDERAL DOLE.

The Senate does not gain in public confidence by making another futile effort to "feed the farmers" out of the Treasury. The House will not reverse its position. The Senate has acted without consulting Judge Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, who is ready to give assurances that that organization is in a position to feed every hungry individual in the twenty drought States. The Red Cross last August notified its chapters in those States to report on the situation in each locality, and steps were taken long ago to distribute food, clothing and other necessaries.

The total cost of Red Cross relief in the drought area can not be estimated now, but there is no basis for the allegation that the Red Cross is insufficiently supplied with funds. If it needs more money it has but to appeal to the public.

If Congress should appropriate $15,000,000 with which to feed the drought sufferers, as proposed by the Senate, what method of distribution would be employed? How can the Government reach the drought sufferers unless it duplicates the machinery already operated by the Red Cross? Why duplicate relief agencies, and thus incur extra overhead expense?

The Senate's action is a reflection upon the American Red Cross, and unless overruled will discourage public support of the Nation's great relief agency. Fortunately the House and the President are determined to block the attempt to place drought sufferers upon a Federal dole. By insisting upon the dole the Senate is delaying the drought relief measure, which makes $45,000,000 available for loans to farmers.

EDDIE SAVOY.

For 59 years Eddie Savoy has been a person of importance around the State Department. He is carried on the rolls of the department as a messenger, but his post is permanently situated outside the door of the Secretary of State, and it is his function to announce and usher in visitors. His acquaintance with diplomats, ancient and modern, includes hundreds of world-famous names.

Eddie Savoy has reached the venerable age of 85. He was eligible for retirement years ago, but succeeding Secretaries of State have kept him on because he is peculiarly fitted by long experience for the task to which he is assigned, and because he serves with unfailing tact, courtesy and kindliness. Now, however, Eddie must be retired unless Congress should by appropriate legislation exempt him from the automatic operation of the retirement act.

At the request of Secretary Stimson Representative Fish is introducing a bill to permit Eddie Savoy to remain in his post so long as the Department of State has need of his services. Congress should act favorably upon this bill. Eddie Savoy, through his 59 years of service, has gained such unique familiarity with the duties of his office that he can not easily be replaced.

NEW DEAL IN FOODSTUFFS.

The decision of Justice Bailey, of the District of Columbia Supreme Court, modifying in part the consent decree entered into by the Government and certain Chicago meat packing concerns in 1920, must be regarded as a distinct victory for the packers. Under the decision the packers may now engage in the preparation and marketing of unrelated products, being barred only from actual operation of retail outlets and from the ownership or operation in whole or in part of stockyards, market newspapers and terminal railroads. While the packers in their suit sought permission to operate retail stores, it was not generally believed that this was their prime consideration in again bringing the consent decree before the courts. Permission to operate retail outlets would have proved a valuable club for use in dealing with the larger chain merchandising organizations had it been obtained, but the packers' chief interest is the utilization of their facilities for the preparation and distribution of fruits, milk, coffee, teas, cereals and other unrelated products. This will be permitted them if Justice Bailey's decision stands.

Since the signing of the consent decree the entire scheme of food distribution has been altered. In 1920 the chain store was an infant. Today a large proportion of the country's edibles is distributed through chain stores. When, prior to 1920, the Chicago packers branched out into the preparation of all kinds of foodstuffs there was reason to fear monopoly, and for this reason the Government called a halt. Today, however, the chain store packs its own meats, prepares its own canned goods and generally carries through of and by itself the whole process of getting food to the ultimate consumer. The packers face a new kind of competition.

As a result of the modification of the decree it will be interesting to see if the ultimate consumer reaps a benefit. Theoretically the chain store is held in check by competition from rival chains, but thus far the chain systems have sought to avoid serious competition. With the packers engaged in the preparation and marketing of varied lines of foodstuffs through the medium of the independent grocer it should follow that the chains will have real competition. Ordinarily competition should result in lowered costs of living.

The packers, however, have vast resources. It may be in their power to exploit the modification of the consent decree to their exclusive advantage. In this event the ultimate consumer would be the loser, even though he were to pay no more for his foodstuffs than he does today. The antitrust laws, however, still stand. If at a later date it should appear that monopolies in foodstuffs are being created relief can be obtained through the antitrust laws. Developments in the processing, preparation and distribution of foodstuffs under the modified consent decree, if the modification stands, will bear close watching.

THE PROHIBITION REPORT.

Word has gone forth, presumably from official sources, that the Law Enforcement Commission has completed a report on prohibition and is about to submit it to the President. The substance of this report seems to have been definitely decided upon, but the reports on other phases of the law enforcement probe have not yet been completed.

Why does the commission contemplate rushing into print with its verbal dynamite when its study of the entire subject is incomplete?

There is no occasion for a special report on prohibition. This commission was not created for the mere sake of securing expert testimony in the prohibition squabble. It was assigned the task of investigating the extent of crime and the efficacy of law enforcement agencies. President Hoover and others have repeatedly insisted that prohibition is only one phase of the greater problem. Has the commission been diverted from its original task by public clamor? Has it subordinated more substantial factors in its work to the prohibition inquiry? If not, why should a report on prohibition be made at this time instead of a report on penal institutions, police methods, or court procedure?

The commission is expected to have its work completed, with some exceptions, by July 1. At that time it will be proper to submit its entire report to the President. Any other course would be extremely unwise. Once before the commission shook public confidence in its work by advocating an absurd formula for handling prohibition cases in the courts when its investigation had hardly more than begun. For the most part, its recommendations were repudiated by public opinion and by Congress. Judgment as to the commission's usefulness was withheld, however, because the public realized that political pressure was responsible for that preliminary report. What pressure is now being exerted to have the commission submit a prohibition report before its work is finished?

Publication of such a report at this time would vitiate the entire work of the commission. It would be interpreted as the only business of the commission, and two years of work on judicial procedure, the cost of crime, police work, prosecution, official lawlessness, &c., would be relegated to dusty pigeonholes. The net result of the commission's studies would be only a new supply of fuse to set off political explosions. No greater contribution could be made to the plot to force an extra session of Congress.

There is no emergency in the enforcement of prohibition laws that makes the submission of this report urgent. Even if the commission should recommend legislative changes there will be no time in the short session to consider them. Nothing can result from a special report on prohibition except a riot of oratory that would obstruct the regular legislative program.

OLD AGE INSURANCE.

Senator Copeland is advocating an old age pension law for the District. He has not yet drawn up a bill for that purpose and intends to seek the advice of the District Commissioners before doing so. Apparently the announcement of his intentions was designed to provoke discussion of the subject so that an intelligent public opinion may be formed.

Washington has less need for old age pensions than any other section of the country because of the Federal retirement laws. A system has been set up whereby employes of the Government may make provision for their unproductive years. There is, of course, need for agencies through which employes of private concerns may provide against indigence in their old age, but insurance is not a Government function.

Old age pensions which offer the people something for nothing are economically unsound. They tend to encourage improvidence and shiftlessness. A considerable percentage of the population would make no effort to provide for old age if the government—State, local or national— should assume that burden. The American people are quite capable of taking care of themselves. They consistently frown upon schemes to subsidize individuals from the public treasury.

President Hoover has given considerable thought to this subject. There has been some indication that he may appoint a commission to delve deeper into the need for old age security and to devise a plan of old age insurance by private corporations. The President is opposed to any scheme that would encourage people to rely upon the Government in their old age rather than to save and invest during their productive years. It is to be hoped that Mr. Hoover will find time to give this subject attention in the near future.

Under these circumstances it would be unwise to press for any legislation on the subject at present. If the subject is brought before Congress it should be approached from the angle of old age insurance, rather than old age pensions. Some companies are already writing old age insurance, and there seems to be no reason why this business should not develop on a scale similar to life insurance if it has the proper leadership. Until this means of old age security has been tested there can be no excuse for launching socialistic ventures.

SLUGGISH LOCAL TRAFFIC.

The Washingtonian who has motored afield, particularly in the Middle West, is impressed upon his return with the disorderliness, the confusion and the sluggishness of local traffic. Whereas elsewhere traffic moves swiftly to its destination, motorists in Washington seem only to be wandering aimlessly through the streets. Whether the system of traffic control is at fault or whether the blame rests upon the individual motorist, the cost of the disorder and sluggishness of local traffic is great. Something should be done promptly to bring order out of confusion and to speed up the vehicular flow.

Washington, with its wide streets, should lend itself readily to the control of traffic without restricting the even progress of motor vehicles. It may be that the local motorist has been so "overregulated" that he has lost the facility for handling his machine to good advantage. Certainly Washingtonians do not handle their cars as skillfully as Midwest operators. While it is true that the local fatality and accident records are unusually low, less confusion would lower the records still further and at the same time result in a more expeditious vehicular movement.

The local traffic problem is now under intensive study. Those whose task it is to make recommendations for reform would do well to study the traffic situation elsewhere, with a view to taking advantage of methods that help to expedite traffic with safety.

NAVAL AVIATION

Ordinary cruisers carry two to four seaplanes which are catapulted and can only be picked up in fair weather by the vessel stopping at sea. Flying deck cruisers can send their planes off and these can return and land on board without interfering with whatever else the cruiser is doing. The flying deck cruiser can carry from 24 to 36 airplanes, and each airplane can carry one 500-pound bomb.

I believe that a fleet on an expedition, unless it has a great many aircraft, will stop as soon as it gets within range of land-based aircraft or even of another fleet equipped with greater numbers of aircraft. Ships have never been able to operate within range of shore fortifications, and they can not now operate within range of enemy aircraft unless these can be defeated. Admiral Pratt, when president of the Naval War College, stated:

"One of the outstanding lessons of the overseas problems played each year is that to advance into a hostile zone the fleet must carry with it an air force that will assure beyond a doubt command of the air. This means not only superiority to enemy fleet aircraft, but also to his fleet and shore-based aircraft combined. This is a large order, and the only way to secure it is by large numbers of carriers and planes."

It has been stated here that aviation in the Navy is being overrated, and that extravagant claims have been made for it. I wish to emphasize that those officers who are connected with aviation do not make extravagant claims for it, because, if these claims are unfounded, they merely react to the disadvantage of aviation.

Aviation is steadily improving—planes, engines, radio, personnel. During the last five years our yearly flying hours have increased from 63,000 to 264,000; hours flown per plane per year, from 74 to 193; hours per fatality, from 3,100 to 14,700; number of planes at sea with the fleet, from 168 to 465.

We have 65 catapults installed on vessels of the fleet, and over a period of ten years more than 10,000 shots have been made with no fatalities due to the catapult. During the last two and one-half years we have made 17,864 landings on aircraft carriers without a fatality due to landing operations. In 1928 the Saratoga launched 84 planes when 140 miles from the Panama Canal about 3 o'clock in the morning and made a successful attack on the canal unmolested and returned to the Saratoga, 50 miles from the canal, without a single casualty.

Hundreds of thousands of square miles of ocean have been scouted by planes from the carriers. Every target practice has been spotted by aircraft. Operations with the fleet night and day and in regular maneuvers have become a matter of routine. Aviation has become an indispensable part of the fleet.

Our personnel is vastly more experienced and skillful. I may say that our aviation can almost be said to be increasing daily in effectiveness. At the present time, in peace, our aviators operate over the open sea under as severe weather conditions as ships can stand. The only thing that stops them is fog or thick weather, and this kind of weather stops surface vessels as well. I know that in time of war our aviators will be willing to take at least as many chances as the men in the trenches did in the last war who knew that in going "over the top" three out of five would not come back.

I will conclude by stating that it is my belief that victory in the next war will depend on control of the air, and that the nation will be victorious which has the greatest number of vessels that can operate aircraft and the greatest number of aircraft that can be transported at sea and be used where they will be most effective for offense and defense.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

WHAT JANET ALREADY KNOWS.

My goodness, how the moments fly!
How swiftly weeks and months roll by!
How rapidly the scheme of things unfurls!
How soon comes wisdom to our little girls!
Here's little Janet, innocent no more,
Already she has learned what money's for

Just eight years old, and at my side she stands
And with a twinkle in her lovely eyes
Asks for the stuff that pays for merchandise!
She knows what money's for, and I may add,
She's learned just how to get it from her dad.

Just eight years old. Already she has learned
How easily the head of man is turned!
A kiss or two, a sigh, a fond caress,
And to her plea the answer will be "yes."
I'll swear it seems from dawn to dusk that she Acquired the gentle art of wheedling me,

Taught by her mother? That I'd never say.
I only know she came to me today,
Stood at my side and gave my cheek a pat—
Gave me a kiss, and whispered in my ear,
"May Janet have a dollar, daddy dear?"

By ROBERT QUILLEN

A LAWYER who takes part in a trial is a sworn officer of the court. He is a servant of the cause of justice.

More than any one else—more than the judge or the jury—he is responsible for what occurs in the courtroom.

In the first place, he makes the laws.

Read the biographies of Presidents, senators and representatives, of Governors and members of State Legislatures, and soon or late, in the great majority of cases you will come to the phrase: "Admitted to the bar."

Judges, high and low, are almost without exception lawyers promoted from the ranks.

America is ruled by lawyers; lawyers alone are responsible for every abuse and miscarriage of justice; and lawyers alone can correct the faults in our system of jurisprudence and make our courts again worthy of respect.

Without respect for its courts, a country is doomed. That is not an exaggeration, but a simple statement of fact. All history shows that a government can not survive when its courts become tools of the powerful, and innocence before the law is a mere matter of possessing sufficient wealth.

The ordinary layman, who knows the law only as something to be dreaded or evaded, has lost faith in all courts—from the lowest to the highest.

He knows that some magistrates buy their offices to protect their criminal friends and fatten on blackmail.

He knows that black or alien or destitute men are given long sentences for crimes that men with money commit without fear of punishment.

He knows that an act regarded as a crime by one Federal court is not even classed as a misdemeanor by another.

He knows that capital punishment is in effect a punishment for poverty; that laws apply only to the poor and those without influence; that men without influence are whipped by the police, "railroaded" to jail, and denied all constitutional rights, while those who have money or powerful friends can evade justice for years and obtain pardons when all other trickeries fail.

He knows that Congress itself does not obey the Constitution; that lawmakers habitually break the law; that the Supreme Court often rules by minority decisions.

He scorns the law, and he will learn to hate it unless the lawyers—who resent lay criticism as though they alone had rights in the matter—place patriotism above precedent and clean out the accumulated rottenness that now disgraces America before the world.

Years ago, when Mr. Wilson was President, Kin Hubbard, who has just died, added to his fame as a Hoosier philosopher, by writing the following paragraph:

This whole country of ours is spending too much time waiting for somebody to make a mistake. Maybe Mr. Hoover is not a political leader. What of it? He is President and he works at that job ten or twelve hours a day. If we would all stop waiting for him to make a mistake or stop spending so much time jest bein' blue over the conditions in the world, and go back to working in the sawmill, things would not be so blue.

Railroad Consolidation.
Louisville Courier Journal.

Further study of the announced plans for consolidation of Eastern railroads into four trunk line systems indicates that the agreement, if approved, is likely to have consequences of great importance to the industrial world, which should be especially helpful in restoring normal employment and improving business conditions generally during the new year.

That President Hoover, the prime mover in the improvement of the inland waterways of the country, should thus forcefully take a hand in bringing about the solution of a troublesome issue in the railroad world does him credit. Any resentment the carriers might hitherto have felt at the President's instigation of river work and the fostering of Government barge lines is likely to be wiped out at once with his bringing the heads of four great railroad systems into agreement on consolidation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Supreme Court Has Already Decided Point Raised by Judge Clark.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No element of novelty was brought to light in the recent decision of Mr. Justice Clark, for the procedural points there advanced were before the United States Supreme Court in a case that directly challenged the power of the Secretary of State to proclaim the eighteenth amendment as a part of the Constitution. I refer to U. S. ex rel Widenmann vs. Hughes, 267 U. S. 619, affirming on appeal the same case sub nom. U. S. ex rel Widenmann vs. Colby, 265 Fed. 998, where all of the propositions featured in the recent decision were distinctly set forth in the petition, presented on the briefs, and as the records will show, argued not only in the court of first instance but in the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia and in the United States Supreme Court.

The Court of Appeals of the District undertook to dispose of the matter upon a technicality, but the Supreme Court instead of evading the issue rendered its decision squarely thus: "Affirmed upon the authority of the national prohibition cases 253 U. S. 350." A subsequent effort (258 U. S. 612) to secure further elaboration of its opinion failed. A reference to the national prohibition cases shows that the questions recently raised in New Jersey had been by the United States Supreme Court decided adversely; and though that court divided upon other points, yet as to conclusions 4 and 5 (253 U. S. at page 386) to the effect that the subject-matter of the eighteenth amendment was within the power to amend and that the amendment had been lawfully proposed and ratified, there was no dissent.

Baptist Ministers Approve Protest Against Misleading World Court Propaganda.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are writing to commend in hearty terms your editorial on "Propaganda Among Churchmen," in your issue of December 30. We raise no question as to the right of any citizen, Christian or otherwise, to exert every right as citizens to bring to pass that which they believe will be for the best interests of our beloved country.

That there has been any statement upon the part of any considerable number of church members which would even seem to be unfair is much lamented by us. Good can never come by doing wrong. Our confidence in our brethren of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America is such that we believe there will be a statement from them which will clear them of any intention of unfairness.

We believe in worldwide peace but protest against the world court as advocated. We believe the founders of our Nation were right when they warned us against any entangling alliances, and protest against any and every effort to entice or stampede us into any such. We believe in the separation of church and state and protest against even Protestants following any other course.

There are great numbers of like conviction with ourselves.

SEVERAL BAPTIST MINISTERS.

Gov. Roosevelt's Local Self-Government Position Pleases a Jacksonian Democrat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reading The Post's editorial, "Gov. Roosevelt's Address," set me to thinking that perhaps in the New York Governor we have the sort of a leader whom good Democrats in all parts of the country would be proud to follow.

If there is one party principle to which Democracy has pointed with special pride in the past it is that of local self-government. That principle ought to be popular, and it is the fault of party shysters that it has not been courageously kept to the front, where Gov. Roosevelt seems determined to put it.

In this connection, these words of The Post sound like a Jacksonian echo from the good old days: "When local governments pass their problems up to the State Legislatures they contribute directly to the disintegration of the American system of government. When States relinquish their functions to Federal authority and try to escape their own duties they are aiding the same destructive causes."

Past disappointments should keep an old campaigner away from positive political prophecy, but the way I feel right now, my choice for 1932 is Franklin D. Roosevelt on a back-to-the-States platform.

HICKORY.

THE CHILD'S SNOW MYTH.

By JOHN HENRY BARTLETT.

The first snow of winter hops down in the night
As if to surprise us young lads when abed;
As soon as we see that the earth has turned white
We scamper up attic to dig out the sled.

I guess the snow loves to kick up as for joy,
To gambol and frolic with wind in the whirls,
For happy he seems to give fun to a boy,

His face I have seen, so I certainly know;
The way that he comes is a funny old trick,
O, winter's not winter unless there is snow.

But why like a thief he should come in the night
When we are not ready with shovel and skate,
And why he should leave when the sun is most bright

HARDING MEMORIAL INVITATIONS ISSUED

Marion, Ohio, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—President Herbert Hoover and former President Calvin Coolidge today were extended official invitations to attend and participate in the dedication of the tomb of the late President and Mrs. Warren G. Harding.

Trustees of the Harding Memorial Association in session here formally extended the invitations and requested that the date for the ceremonies be set for some time between next May 15 and November 15, to suit the convenience of the Nation's Chief Executive and the man he succeeded.

In extending the invitations, which asked President Hoover to deliver the dedicatory address and Mr. Coolidge to preside over the ceremonies, the trustees of the association took cognizance of a recent White House indication that President Hoover would participate in the dedication of the tomb if invited to do so.

The resolution inviting Mr. Hoover and Mr. Coolidge was introduced by Harry M. Daugherty, Attorney General in the Harding Cabinet. It was adopted unanimously. It provides that copies be carried to the President and to Mr. Coolidge by a committee headed by Joseph H. Frelinghuysen, president of the association, and Hoke Donithen, secretary. It further specified that details and the program of dedication be drawn up by officers of the association and fixed and carried out to meet the approval of President Hoover and former President Coolidge.

The Harding memorial, a white marble structure on the outskirts of Marion, was erected with funds collected from thousands of citizens of the United States. The bodies of the former President and Mrs. Harding were laid to rest in the imposing memorial tomb several years ago.

Harding Portrait Cost Is Approved

House Committee Allows $5,000 for Canvas in White House.

Cost of a portrait of former President Warren G. Harding and hung in the White House was the subject of questioning by the House appropriations committee in the course of the executive hearings on the first deficiency bill held recently.

The portrait was painted by F. Luis Mors, of Gayiordsville, Conn., and the cost of it was $2,500. The painting was authorized by the committee on Library of Congress, of which Senator Simeon Fess, of Ohio, is chairman. The picture was completed and hung in the White House before the House appropriations committee got around to considering its cost, and apparently the idea irked Representative William R. Wood (Republican), of Indiana, chairman.

Mr. Wood suggested that if Mr. Fess had authorized a fee of $5,000 for the painting there would be little else for the House committee to do but approve it. Col. U. S. Grant, 3d, before the committee at the time, said he didn't know, but he didn't imagine such a sum would be approved. The item was approved.

Chamber Urges Park Plan Speed

Resolution Adopted by Body at Bethesda; Committee Is Named.

Action to speed up the Rock Creek Park extension project in Montgomery County was urged in a resolution adopted last night by the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, in the County Building at Bethesda. Delegates from five other chambers of commerce, those of Silver Spring, Rockville, Gaithersburg, Takoma Park and Kensington, attended the meeting, but did not commit their organizations.

In accordance with the resolution, Capt. Chester Wells, who presided, appointed the following committee: George Sacks, Merle Thorpe, Emory Bogley, and Edward H. Jones. This group will represent Bethesda in a proposed joint committee, to which each of the chambers is expected to send delegates. Most of the delegates appeared to favor the project, but were unable to take a formal stand.

It is hoped that the project can be completed in time for the George Washington bicentennial in 1932.

Melfi Neighborhood Again Visited by Strong Earthquake.

Melfi, Italy, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—A strong earthquake of about 5 seconds duration was felt here at 4:25 o'clock this morning. No victims were reported.

Several walls fell at the nearby town of Barile, where one house was wrecked and several others severely damaged. Government civil engineers were rushed to Barile immediately.

Melfi, one of the centers which suffered the most during the earthquake of July 23, was just beginning to recover and to rebuild. Several slight earthshocks were felt here during 1930, but none were as heavy as that of this morning. This morning's shock was preceded by slight tremors during the night.

(Associated Press.)

Improving and refinishing the exterior of the famous statue in New York harbor, installing a new automatic elevator within and doubling the flood-lighting power without, was recommended by the House appropriations committee yesterday in the Army supply bill. The cost was set at $58,465, plus $8,907 for additional electricity.

Woman Killed by Gas.

The Republican national committee ended the year 1930 with a balance of $92,804.89 in the treasury, according to a report received by the clerk of the House of Representatives yesterday from Treasurer J. R. Nutt.

During the year expenditures by the Republican national committee aggregated $743,949.79. Contributions received totaled $700,391. An unexpended balance of $136,363.38, carried over from 1929, prevented the committee from winding up its 1930 fiscal affairs with a treasury deficit.

James W. Gerard, treasurer of the Democratic national committee, recently submitted his report, disclosing a deficit of more than $600,000.

The Democratic congressional campaign committee managed to keep out of the red, Robert N. Harper, its treasurer, reporting receipts of $1,990.50 and disbursements of $1,798.15, leaving a balance of $194.35.

Robert L. Nagle, treasurer of the Western division of the national Republican speakers bureau filed a financial statement for 1930, showing total receipts of $46,000 and disbursements of $37,271.51. Listed among the expenditures is an item of $700 to defray the cost of a radio address by Vice President Curtis.

In the fight between Senator Norris and former Senator Hitchcock in Nebraska, the Antisaloon League in that State reported an expenditure of $667.75 and receipts of the same amount. Hitchcock, Democrat, ran as a wet.

The Crusaders, wet youth organization, spent $107.25 in support of Seymour H. Person, antiprohibition candidate, who defeated Representative Louis C. Cramton, outstanding dry leader, in the Sixth Michigan District.

The campaign committee of the Antisaloon League of America reported receipts aggregating $7,235.25 and expenditures totaling $6,762.72, leaving a balance of $472.53. According to the report, the bulk of the contributions came from persons giving less than $100. Among the interesting expenditures listed by the league are a payment on October 24 of $312.50 to F. Scott McBride "for services," and a second payment of $332.88 for traveling expenses. William A. (Billy) Sunday received $300 for services and $93.41 for expenses. A payment of $229.16 went to E. B. Dunford, attorney for the league, for services.

A report filed by George G. Bolingshead, of Montclaire, treasurer of the New Jersey Antisaloon League, lists contributions of $5,839.48 and expenditures totaling $5,511.29.

The financial report of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee has not reached the clerk of the House, and is assumed to be en route by mail. It is the only one of the major reports not yet received.

$446,024,000 ARMY BILL IS GIVEN HOUSE

118,000 MEN PROVIDED

An appropriation of $446,024,000 was allowed the War Department for maintenance of the Army and prosecution of waterway projects next fiscal year in the annual supply bill received yesterday by the House.

The military activities drew $334,956,000, including $134,664,000 for pay, while engineering activities received $111,067,000, of which $60,000,000 was designated for rivers and harbors, $35,000,000 for flood control on the Mississippi and $1,000,000 for Sacramento River flood control.

The measure carried $390,000 less than appropriations for the current year, and was $4,316,000 below the Budget Bureau estimates. The pay provision was for a force of 118,000 men.

Would Curb Writing Officers.

Two legislative provisions were recommended. One would prevent purchase by the Army within continental United States of any raw materials produced outside this country. The second would prohibit payment of salaries to officers on the active list who are employed or engaged in any manner with a publication carrying paid advertisements. This is directed at officers who have been writing for magazines and undoubtedly will meet with opposition in both Senate and House.

Among the large allotments for military purposes were $31,915,000 for the Air Corps, which is expected to practically complete the five-year expansion program; $92,061,000 for subsistence, clothing, equipment, transportation, and construction at military posts under the housing program; $10,816,000 for ordnance, including repairs at arsenals; $33,058,000 for the militia, and $2,666,000 for the Military Academy at West Point. Citizens Military Training Camps received $6,771,000, while the organized reserves were awarded $6,765,000.

Metal Dirigible Research.

Included in the $31,915,740 allotment to the Air Corps is $200,000 for research to determine whether the corps should build a "tin can"—or metal-clad dirigible. Three hundred thousand dollars also will be spent to purchase three nonrigid airships. For new airplanes, the department was allowed $15,296,231.

Under the military section of the bill the Panama Canal Zone was given $2,739,000, but $11,493,000 was allowed for maintenance and operation of the big ditch and the civil government.

Important nonmilitary allowances included $1,161,000 for national cemeteries; $1,785,000 for national military parks; $800,000 for roads and bridges in Alaska, and $298,000 for the Washington-Alaska cable; $254,000 for Muscle Shoals Dam, No. 2; $17,000 for the California Debris Commission, and $400,000 for a Mississippi Valley flood emergency fund.

Purchase by R-K-O Of Pathe Is Approved

New York, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Stockholders of Pathe Exchange, Inc., approved sale of assets of the company to Radio-Keith-Orpheum today. After an all-day meeting 662,232 shares of common stock and 6,613 shares of preferred stock were voted to ratify the sale agreement which involves a price of $4,630,789.

Less than 1 per cent of common stock, 9,062 shares, and only nineteen shares of preferred were voted against the sale.

At the end of twenty days Radio-Keith-Orpheum will take over all properties, including unfinished films, contracts, leases, &c., of Pathe except the Dupont-Pathe Film Manufacturing Co., Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the directors, announced.

VIRGINIA QUIZ BEGUN ON BORDER INCIDENT

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Jan. 5.—Gov. John Garland Pollard this evening ordered Acting Adjt. Gen. Samuel R. Waller, of Richmond, to make an investigation shortly after Gov. O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina, had telephoned the Virginia executive that militiamen were stopping trucks at the Virginia-Carolina line beyond Schoolfield.

The development was somewhat mystifying here. Maj. Reese Grubert, who has succeeded Col. H. L. Opie in command of the troops here, declined to make any comment on the telephoned exchange.

Last week a squad of soldiers was hurried to the line on receipt of reports that armed men were turning back truck drivers coming into Virginia, but they had no work to do, and eye witnesses said they remained on this side of the line.

Fires Called Incendiary.

Two fires of alleged incendiary origin visited the strike field last night and four men were in jail today held answerable. Mrs. W. T. Dooley, of Bannerville, who supports her paralyzed husband, said that at midnight flames were discovered on the porch, but were quickly put out. Troops arrived and claimed to have found the woodwork still damp with gasoline. In an adjoining house a gasoline can was found, also a funnel. Four men were detained—J. W. Jones, 31; M. L. Spivey, 60; J. R. Jeffries, 38, and L. J. Branstone. The jailor said this evening that no formal charges had been preferred by the civilian authorities, to whom the four were turned over.

The other fire was at Newtown where an unoccupied house belonging to Charles Johnson was found in flames. Johnson is a mill worker. Military authorities in this case also said the fire appeared to have been set. The building was destroyed.

The mills resumed operations in heavy rain this morning without demonstrations or disorders. The picket lines were slim and the military guard at Schoolfield was curtailed. Observers saw little difference in the numerical response to the whistle to that of last week.

When corporation court opened here this morning Judge Henry C. Leigh charged the grand jury at great length, reading portions of the Virginia code and explained the law of intimidation, unlawful assembly, the antilynching law which considers groups of men bent on evil purpose as a "mob," each member as guilty as any other in the eyes of the law. The judge also pointed out that the circulation of false rumors regarding banks is an offense.

Local authorities quickly made clear today the fact that while the city and county are offering rewards of $1,000 each for information leading to the conviction of dynamiters, no one will collect $2,000 in case of success. The reward of $1,000 will be paid in which ever jurisdiction the case is tried. In some quarters the rewards are deprecated in view of the possibility of frame-up of innocent persons for the purpose of evening up grudges.

The grand jury this evening returned true bills of indictment against thirteen union members charged with assaulting C. W. McKellar, a nonunion worker. Indictments are found under the Virginia antilynching statute, the accused persons being designated in the indictment as "mob." Each of the thirteen faces two indictments because McKellar's daughter was also struck, it is alleged.

that many aliens who have been located by the field officers manage to escape pending the arrival of a warrant.

He also made these recommendations:

That the law with respect to burden of proof be clarified so as to permit the deportation of certain classes of undesirables, anarchists and the like, who now are safe just so long as they can show that they came in lawfully.

That the law be amended so that alien criminals may be deported for crimes other than those involving moral turpitude, which now is the sole ground for deportation.

That the department be authorized to prosecute deportation cases in the judicial district in which the alien is located, rather than being forced to remove him to the district in which he gained entry.

That the law covering the harboring of aliens be made more drastic so as to reach those persons who, though having had no part in bringing the alien in, yet have knowledge of the alien's unlawful act and help to conceal him.

With regard to deporting aliens connected with organizations advocating the overthrow of the United States Government, Secretary Doak pointed out that the Fish committee now has this problem under consideration.

THRONGS OF FRENCH PASS JOFFRE'S BIER

HOURS ARE EXTENDED

Paris, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Marshal Joseph Jacques Joffre, the "Defender of Paris" as he will go down in history, lay in state today to receive homage from the people of France that has rarely, perhaps never, been surpassed in his country's annals.

All knew beforehand that magnificent manifestations of respect would be paid beside the bier of the man who was almost an idol of the French masses, but the number of Frenchmen and French women who poured from their homes today to honor him exceeded all forecasts.

The crowd began to take form at dawn and slowly, as the day advanced, it grew until just before nightfall it became a vast multitude which at one moment got out of bounds and women were knocked down and trampled upon before order was restored.

At first a single line, the stream of those who filed through the portals of France's famous military school to pause for a moment beside the body of the old warrior, grew twenty deep and stretched from the entrance of the school nearly a quarter of a mile away across the Champ de Mars.

Body Lies on Soldier's Cot.

There were many thousands of them, and one of the most touching tributes was that of the hundreds of children who joined in the solemn march. It was a dreary wait, but the marshal's countrymen stood patiently with little to say.

Once inside the chapel where the body lay on a simple soldier's cot, the crowd was kept slowly moving by army officers who gave the privileged places to mutilated soldiers come to give a final salute to the leader under whom they had served.

Outside again the thousands did not leave, but formed a silent mass on the opposite side of the great square of the Champ de Mars, under the shadow of the Eiffel Tower. Hawkers sold miniature French flags, strips of paper bearing the portraits of the marshal and printed copies of his memorable message to the French army on the eve of the Battle of the Marne.

Widow Prays in Balcony.

At one time when the chapel was particularly crowded Mme. Joffre stole quietly into the balcony of France's marshals overlooking the bier and for nearly an hour knelt in prayer. A little later the Italian general, Albrichi, accompanied by three officers who came from Rome for the purpose, laid upon the catafalque a great wreath of roses.

It had been intended to close the doors of the chapel at 9 p. m., but at that hour there were still many thousands waiting, and it was decided to let all pass by who wished, despite the lateness of the hour.

The body will lie in state again tomorrow, and tomorrow night will be taken to the Arc de Triomphe and then to the Cathedral of Notre Dame, where on Wednesday a great national funeral will be held.

Joffre Liked Pershing From Minute They Met

Paris, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Marshal Joffre liked Gen. Pershing, the American commander in chief, from the moment he first met him in the office of Secretary of War Newton Baker in 1917, Col. Jean Fabry, the marshal's aid, said today in the newspaper Intransigeant.

"Pershing," Col. Fabry wrote, "spoke not a word of French and Joffre not a word of English. They looked at one another for several minutes and finally the marshal came to me and told me, 'He is a fine looking soldier; he has a nation of 100,000,000 behind him; tell him I should like to be his friend.'"

Court May Delay Stephenson's Plea

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 5 (A.P.). The long pending appeal of D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, from his sentence of life imprisonment for murder, may be still further delayed by a change in the membership of the Indiana Supreme Court. One of two new judges elected last November took office today and the other will take office Wednesday.

Stephenson, once a power in Indiana politics, was convicted in 1925 of the murder of Miss Madge Oberholtzer, of Indianapolis. His appeal has been completed for nearly two years.

The three justices whose terms continue may decide the case themselves. If the new judges participate in the decision, however, they may ask for a new oral argument if they so desire, and they may spend several months in studying the record.

Walker Post of the American Legion at Lincoln Temple Congregation Church for Friday night, when Mr. Darrow will speak on military matters to the extent that they affect the Negro. Col. West A. Nationality Protocol Approval to Be Asked

Secretary Stimson said yesterday he plans to ask early ratification by the Senate of the protocol on dual nationality adopted by The Hague conference for codification of international law.

The protocol, adopted last year, was signed by Hugh R. Wilson, American Minister to Switzerland, on instructions by the department. Its principal feature would be the exemption from military service in the country of their former residence of persons who have taken up nationality in the second country.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

TREATMENT OF BURNS.

THE treatment of burns is on a very satisfactory basis. This is true of the home treatment of milder burns and the medical treatment of the severer ones. In the case of mild burns the best procedure is to cover the surface well with sterilized petroleum and cover this with a clean dressing. The old-time mixture of lime water and grease, called carron oil, did not cover and exclude the air so well as petroleum and it was always full of bacteria and oftentimes it was rancid. If a fresh, unopened jar of petroleum is available it should be used. If none is at hand, except in a jar already opened, it can be sterilized by heat.

The treatment of deeper burns by tannic acid continues in favor. A 2 to 5 per cent solution in water is used. This is sprayed over the surface. The spraying is repeated several times. The object is to change the surface of the wound to dark brown. When this has been accomplished the tannic acid is discontinued. In fact, no further treatment is used except that a protective covering may be applied. If no way of spraying the tannic acid solution is available it may be applied by means of saturated gauze. The tannic acid tans the burned tissues, and in that way retards their decomposition and prevents absorption of poisons from the wounds.

A burn that is even moderately severe causes considerable shock. Therefore it is well to have the patient lie down, especially while the dressing is being done. Arising suddenly, changing posture may cause him to faint. The use of warm tea or coffee, or of some stimulant such as aromatic spirits of ammonia or camphor is advisable. Sometimes a dose of a simple sedative helps.

In more serious burns the body suffers from loss of water. The drinking of fluids such as water, milk and soups should be insisted on. In many cases the physician must get water into the system by one of several injection methods. There is a tendency to acidosis. To combat that in severe burning, soda or some other alkali or alkaline water is given.

SLEEPING ON STOMACH.

E. E. R. writes: In reply to a question from W. J. T. recently you said that well people "never sleep on the stomach for many minutes consecutively." I am perfectly well, sleep soundly (most of the time without having moved) and have slept on my stomach ever since I can remember, and I am nearly 52 years of age. I sleep with my left hand under my chin, my right hand under my stomach, and my left knee bent somewhat.

REPLY.

You meant to tell me that I did not know what I was writing, though you were kind enough to be indirect about it. In spite of your courtesy I want to disagree with you. If you will have an unpime watch you sleep and a secretary keep the score the record will prove that you flop front to back, back to side every few minutes just as do all others here below.

IRON AND CALCIUM FOOD.

E. N. writes: Will you list the foods that contain iron and calcium?

REPLY.

Among the foods richest in iron are yeast, gluten, romaine and other salads, egg yolk, peas and beans, bran and molasses, meats and oatmeal.

Those richest in lime are cheese, milk, butter, beans, salads, greens, yeast and nuts.

You'd be amazed to learn that the front and the back of this smart lounging robe cut all in one piece. Merely shoulder seams to be joined. The tuxedo collar that extends to the hemline is then sewed at the neckline and down the side front. It is ready now for the sleeves to be set into the armholes.

It will make a delightful gift. There are numberless fabrics suitable for its development. The rayon silks are especially popular. Flannel in wide stripes is another favorite. Satin crepe, flat crepe and velvet are fascinatingly lovely.

Style No. 745 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39-inch material with 1⅝ yards of 35-inch contrasting.

Representative Will R. Wood (Republican), of Indiana, was 70 years old yesterday and the event was recognized when Representative Joseph W. Byrns (Democrat), of Tennessee, one of the Democratic leaders, called attention of the House to it.

Flowers sent by friends converted Representative Wood's desk into a bower. He is chairman of the House Appropriations committee.

What Today Means to You

CAPRICORN.

IF January 6 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 a. m. to 11 a. m., and from 3 p. m. to 6 p. m. The only danger period is from 8 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.

The planetary aspects of January 6 are, on the whole, favorable, although there will be many trifling worries that will cause dissatisfaction and disappointment. The signs encourage efforts of importance, but do not promise much for smaller undertakings. Avoid speculation!

Children born on this January 6 will require more than usual care in infancy. Past this stage, they will develop into robust adulthood. Hard-headed, and never dominated by emotion, they are bound to succeed. They will brush aside ruthlessly all opposition and tear down all obstacles.

You were born on January 6! Then the world is at your feet, if you will only take advantage, without dilly-dallying, of the many opportunities at hand. You are exceptionally bright, not intellectual, but intelligent. You are full of vitality, endowed with common sense, and your vision is always practical, never chimerical. Success generally attends your efforts, as you do not embark on any enterprise, regardless of its size, without having carefully weighed the "pros" and "cons." The same spirit animates you in your relations with others. You are never obsessed with the accuracy of your own point of view, and are always willing to concede that others may, in all sincerity, hold views diametrically opposed to yours.

Why then, with such a "make-up" do you lag behind those who are not so generously gifted? Your horoscope reveals that you are spasmodic. You lack that continuity of effort which is essential to great achievement. Problems are attacked by you with a vim and an enthusiasm that call forth every one's admiration. The vim quickly vanishes, and the enthusiasm wanes, just as soon as you enter the drudging sphere—and there is always drudgery in every worthwhile achievement.

Your disposition is never soured by failure to make good. You realize your own defects and never "pass the buck." In the home, you will always find sympathy and understanding and deep affection.

Thomas Chittenden, first State governor of Vermont.
Charles Sumner, statesman.
James A. Burden, manufacturer.
Clarence King, geologist.
Henry E. Dixey, actor.
Joan of Arc, French heroine.

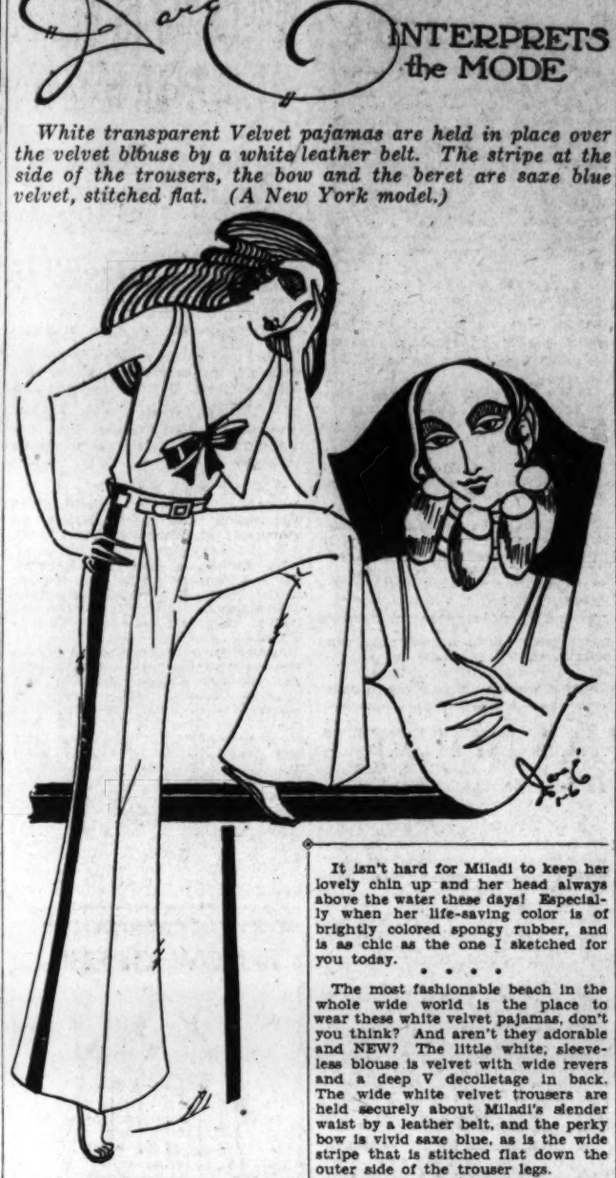
Jane Corbett INTERPRETS the MODE

White transparent Velvet pajamas are held in place over the velvet blouse by a white leather belt. The stripe at the side of the trousers, the bow and the beret are saxe blue velvet, stitched flat. (A New York model.)



Paris, Jan. 5.

I'VE never seen more colorful, interesting and unusual blouses than are used in many costumes this spring. The Jane Regny blouses, for instance, of silk-and-wool or silk-and-cotton mixture, with tiny cross-bar effects in plaids of light colors. What a relief these new plaids are, anyway, after the sameness of the prints we have been wearing for so many seasons past!

These plaid blouses are used for many and varied occasions—I saw a sports dress for golf with a lightweight wool navy skirt and a yoked blouse in red, blue and yellow cross-barred wool material. In the same collection there was a more formal blouse of plaid lame (lah-may) to be worn with a black velvet skirt.

By way of contrast, both boleros and tunics are having their respective praises widely sung! The Russian influence is still playing a large part with all-over embroidery designs on many of the new tunics. And the tiny boleros are often accented and enhanced by rows and rows of cire braiding in self-color, a contrasting color or black on any of the season's bright colors.

It isn't hard for Miladi to keep her lovely chin up and her head always above the water these days! Especially when her life-saving color is of brightly colored spongy rubber, and is as chic as the one I sketched for you today.

• • • •

The most fashionable beach in the whole wide world is the place to wear these white velvet pajamas, don't you think? And aren't they adorable and NEW? The little white, sleeveless blouse is velvet with wide revers and a deep V decolletage in back. The wide white velvet trousers are held securely about Miladi's slender waist by a leather belt, and the perky bow is vivid saxe blue, as is the wide stripe that is stitched flat down the outer side of the trouser legs.

I think the Lovely Lady who bought them in New York is gazing, fascinated, at her reflection in the wild waves below, don't you? 'N' can we blame her?

I wore a certain Agnes hat of mine two or three occasions, and just EVERY ONE I met admired it greatly—and told me so! Somehow or other, it got to be one of those hats that was just right for pretty nearly every occasion that fill a busy fashion-lady's daytime hours. 'N' I was glad, for I had paid plenty-and-plus for it in the beginning. Yet it was such a simple thing that I wondered, and Mamzelle poked and pried—and we found it wasn't at all hard to make, and every one we did make looked exactly like my original, and not at all homemade. So, of course, I worked out a leaflet for you, and the Dare department of The Washington Post will send you a copy if you will only send them your stamped, self-addressed envelope! The material costs very little, and the hat is easy and pleasant to make—and SO becoming to every type.

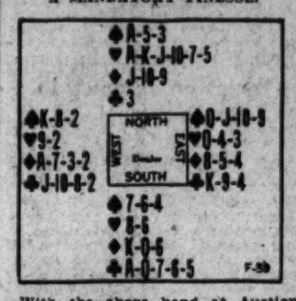
WORK ON BRIDGE

A MANDATORY FINESSE.



With the above hand at Auction Bridge South would bid one Club, North one Heart, South one No Trump or two Clubs, and North in either event two Hearts (West and East always passing); that would end the auction.

At Contract, West and East did not bid, but South bid one Club, North two Hearts, South two No Trumps and North four Hearts.

East led the Queen of Spades; North took the trick and led two rounds of trumps, failing to catch the adverse Queen. North then led a Diamond; West won and captured two Spade tricks, which, with the Queen of Hearts, saved game.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

Declarer, winning the first Spade trick, could count nine sure tricks as follows: One Spade, five Hearts, two Diamonds and one Club; but he also could see that if he did not catch the Queen of Hearts he would lose one Heart, two Spades and one Diamond unless he made the Club finesse. He therefore should lead out his Ace and King of Hearts to see if he could catch the Queen and avoid risking the Club finesse. Then when he failed to drop the Queen, he should lead his singleton Club to trick 4 and finesse dummy's Queen. If the finesse lost, the Declarer would lose five tricks; but if it won, he could discard a Spade on the Ace of Clubs and lose only one Heart, one Spade and one Diamond.

It always pays to risk a finesse that offers an even chance if winning it will produce a game, although losing it may cost an extra trick.

YOUR NAME WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

The family name "Mellon" is a modern form of the original Irish "O Meallain," which means "the descendant of "Maellan." The personal name "Meallan," is a diminutive form of "Meall," which means "pleasant." This name is especially common in Ulster, where it appears to have originated.

The family name "Selden," (also spelled "Seldon" and "Seldom") may be traced back to three English sources. When it is derived from the old English "sealh-denu" its full significance is "he who lives at or near the valley where willow trees grow." Sometimes its source is the old English "sele-denu," meaning "the valley near the hall," and likewise indicating an original place of residence. A third source is the middle English "selde," meaning "booth" or "shop," and indicating the place of business or residence of the persons who were first so called.

The family name "O'Meara" (also spelled "Meara," "O'Mara" and "Mara") is of Celtic origin. It is generally the modern form of the original Irish 'O'Meadhra," which means "the descendant of Meadhair." "Meadhair" was an old personal name which may be translated "mirth" or "the merry person." The English name "Mears" has often been adopted by Irish families who were originally called "Meara" or "O'Meara."

The family name "Neff" is of German origin. It is one of the several modern variations of "Nevo." "Nevo" was an old personal name meaning "the nephew." It appears as a personal name in old records as far back as the eighth century. It seems to be first recorded as a family name in the year 1244, at which time an old document mentions a certain Burchardus der Nevo.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

DEAR Frances McDonold: A letter sent in by Nettie, ends by saying, "What have you braves to say?" I judge from this she is expecting an answer from the young men who read your column, so I will say my say and hope she will answer. She begins by saying "the men she knows would walk away from there if a girl would dare to stop talking to draw breath," as they expect the girl to entertain them. My, what a girl! She can talk without drawing a breath. Whose fault is it that Nettie knows only this kind of fellow? Perhaps its birds of a feather? And why should she refuse to be entertaining.

What does she expect to do for the favors the young men show her? Does she think they go out with her to hear themselves talk? No; if that was all they wanted they could stay home and talk to the mirror. They go out with her in order to have some one to talk with, not to. A fellow will not talk shop or office to a girl, because ten to one she lacks the knowledge to understand his point of view. On the contrary, women do all the talking, and probably this fellow could not get a word in sideways. I never can! Nettie is narrow enough to judge all men by the fellow she went with last winter. Men used to consider the female sex the weaker, but after taking part in a Christmas rush and reading some of the things they write to your column, it looks as if the modern girl is weak mentally only.

Nettie herself said that most of the boys have only loose change. If she knows this why does she expect so much of that loose change? She humbled herself enough to allow a young man to spend his time and loose change taking her to the movies. The thrill that comes once in a life time. Now isn't that nice of her?

She wants to know why fellows tell each other when a girl is an expense, yet it is all right for her to tell all her girl friends what a cheap skate the fellow that took her to the theater was because he did not take her home in a taxi when it rained on her new hat. I'm sure it was not much of a walk and if she would have made a suggestion he would have hailed a cab. A suggestion was all that was needed. Women have all the brains. Where was Nettie? The fellows in her part of the city or country never had a thought, or so she says. Perhaps it is best for her that they don't, or they would take girls out who would really appreciate their company.

The best thing Nettie can do is to stay home and let the fellows spend their time and loose change on some one who will appreciate it. Perhaps if she were to write in and tell us what kind of a fellow she wants we can help her find him, for I am sure that at least one of every type possible lives somewhere in this great world, and many of your readers have traveled far.

Some day Nettie will find the right one, and she will walk down the street arm in arm, and will not know if it is raining or not; but just now she believes in letting the fresh air in and the hot air out. Why not be fair?

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

The Cuckoo Clock.

When Willie was 2 an adoring aunt asked him what he wanted for his birthday. His response was prompt.

"Willie wants a cuckoo clock!" and it was a cuckoo clock she gave him despite his parents' protest that it was a ridiculous present for a child of his age.

That was 38 years ago, but the cuckoo clock still hangs in Willie's bedroom and faithfully calls the hours. There also are a score or more of other clocks in the house to keep it company.

All keep perfect time, and chimes and bells simultaneously announce the hour in every room.

For clocks have remained Willie's hobby. He can take any clock apart and put it together again. The tiny forceps with which he tests the tiny wheels and springs are to him what a stethoscope is to a physician.

Early in life his interest in clocks led him to an interest in all things mechanical. Today he knows as much about automobiles and engines of many sorts as he does about clocks, and he has made a very definite success as an expert in automobile mechanics.

The hobbies of youth seldom lead up a blind alley. Early interests are apt to follow the lines of special aptitudes. To discourage or to laugh at a child's hobby is often to prevent him from finding the occupation which would best suit him in adult life.

Even if the nature of a childhood hobby is such that it does not readily lend itself to development as a life work, it may yet prove a lasting pleasure as an avocation.

During the early years it has a direct educational value not only in the knowledge and skill it helps the child to acquire, but in the concentration, persistence and thorough work habits it tends to develop.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

(Bureau of Biological Survey.)

A bird house placed on a pole or in a tree may be made inaccessible to cats by use of a sheet metal guard. This may either be a cylinder about 18 inches long tacked closely to the trunk or a cone placed high enough to prevent cats from springing from the ground and securing a hold above it. Iron pipes as nest supports are cat-proof in themselves. A far-overhanging sloping roof close over the opening also is a partial protection against cats. In some situations, wire screens of a mesh large enough to permit the passage of the bird may be used to inclose the box in such a way as to prevent cats from reaching the nests. A more effective but expensive protection involves the use of vermin proof fences built of a strongly woven wire of not more than 1½-inch mesh. Such a fence should be about six feet high with an outward overhang of two feet at the top.

Prices realized on Swift & Co. sales of carcass beef in Washington, D. C., for week ending Saturday, January 3, 1931, on shipments sold out ranged from 12.00 cents to 21.00 cents per pound and averaged 16.92 cents per pound.—Adv.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me the names of three good hardy lilies. Also explain necessary winter protection. MRS. WILLIAM B. P.

Lilium myriophyllum (regal lily), superbum (American turk's cap lily) and auratum (gold-banded lily of Japan), are all reliable and desirable in every way. When hard frost sets in cover the plants with a few inches of leaves or litter for protection the first winter.

Please tell me about a shrub listed as fragrant viburnum. Is this bush a slow grower? AMANDA M. T.

Fragrant viburnum (viburnum carlesi), is a rather slow-growing shrub of dwarf habit. It will prove a welcome addition to any garden or shrub border.

Please tell me of a few varieties of trees suitable for planting along the sidewalk. I know some varieties are taboo, and I want to choose wisely, as I have to buy eleven trees for planting along the sidewalk of my new home. MAE T. P.

Living as you do in the suburbs you have a wider choice than do persons living in the cities where there is so little room for tree roots. Maple, white and green ash, tulip tree, pin oak, red oak, gingko and elm are all desirable and reliable varieties.

Please tell me of a pleasing plant for a hanging basket in a sunny schoolroom. The vine need not be a blooming variety. Please tell me the name of the plant from which I have taken the inclosed leaf and whether it will grow in a basket in a schoolroom. A NEW TEACHER.

The leaf you inclosed was from the tradescanthia, about the very best plant I know of for school use. Ivy geranium would also do well in such a location.

Please tell me something about sowing sweetpea seed. I do not mean to plant it until spring, but I want at that time to understand how to arrange the rows and also how deep to plant the seed. MARY G. L.

A sunny, open space is absolutely necessary; shade of any sort should be avoided. Sweet peas will grow in any kind of soil, provided it is fairly deep and the roots can easily penetrate it. They love moisture, and a soil which retains moisture will materially aid in successful growing. They are usually planted in rows. A trench or furrow should be made from 6 to 12 inches deep (the deeper the better), and 12 inches wide. In the bottom place a layer of well rotted manure, on top of which place a layer of well-pulverized soil. Sweet peas are best grown in double rows with the supports between them. Seeds should be covered with more than an inch of soil.

Please tell me something about peat moss, which I see so often mentioned in garden books and magazine articles. I have never seen this material. HELEN J. L.

Peat moss is a moisture-retaining humus and an important aid to soil fertility and moisture. It is used for mulching rosebuds, shrubbery, evergreens and rhododendrons. Late in the autumn it is sometimes used as a covering for lawns.

...GADSKI IS SUPERB IN WAGNER OPERA

Dr. Schillings Also Praised in "Goetterdaemmerung," Sung in Capital.

SOCIETY AT PRODUCTION

Johanna Gadski, former Wagnerian prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, was a brilliant Bruennhilde last night in the opening performance of the German Grand Opera Company at the National Theater in Richard Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung."

Second only in interest to the appearance of Mme. Gadski and her associates in the stellar roles of the opera, was that of Dr. Max von Schillings, noted German composer and conductor, friend of President von Hindenburg of the German republic, who is musical director of the third transcontinental tour and principal conductor of the company. That last night's audience was well aware of Dr. von Schillings' genius as a conductor was evinced again and again last night in the spontaneous ovations which greeted his appearance in the conductor's stand.

Last night's performance was the opening of its transcontinental tour and many out-of-town critics and music lovers were noted in the audience. A full symphony orchestra and chorus added to the musical brilliance of the evening.

New Wagnerian Star.

One of the surprises of the night was the discovery of a new Wagnerian star in Marie Von Essen, singing the role of "Waltraute." She was second only in feminine honors to Gadski herself and whose voice was a lovely velvety contralto. Miss Von Essen is an American girl, from Detroit, and she was chosen by the managing director of the German Grand Opera Company, Mr. G. G. Vincent, not only for the beauty of her voice, but for her dramatic ability and striking personality as well.

That Mme. Gadski, now in the ranks of veteran prima donnas, has lost practically none of her artistry and dramatic mastery of operatic roles was shown again and again last night in the exacting impersonation of "Bruennhilde."

Johannes Sembach as "Siegfried" sang admirably, in tones free and of wide range, emotionally expressive without exaggeration and with dramatic comprehension. His "Siegfried" was convincing.

Laurels for Max Roth.

Another of the masculine singers who won new laurels was Max Roth in the role of Gunther. Impressive, he seemed of a big rich voice, perfectly at home in the role. It was a treat to see and hear him. In the male trio at the close of the first act when the blood brotherhood is sworn by Siegfried, Gunther and Hagen a new element was added in the splendid voice of Carl Braun as Hagen.

The opera was given in the traditional Wagnerian method and the thorough knowledge of the opera shown by every singer was a delightful novelty. One felt instinctively that the opera singers knew their roles from A to Z, and, of course, their German diction in its accuracy and proper emphasis was an added joy to music lovers present. In fact, the performance was a course in operatic presentation for any student of that art present.

The ensemble was splendidly trained, possessed of fine, youthful voices and whenever it appeared it added much to the scene.

Among the other principals effective in their roles were Isolde von Bernhard as Gutruna, Annette Royak as Woglinde, Adi Almosling as Flosshilde, while Isolde von Bernhard capably doubled in a role as Wellgunde.

Don Giovanni Tonight.

The presentation of Mozart's "Don Giovanni" tonight with Eric Wildhagen in the title role and Margarethe Baumer singing "Donna Anna," will mark the close of the all too brief season of the German Grand Opera Company in Washington this week.

If tonight's performance equals that of last night, the company, its officials and Mrs. Wilson Greene, who brought them to Washington, certainly deserve sincere congratulations for providing this world capital with the opening performances of the transcontinental tour of these musical pilgrims from the land of Wagner.

Brilliant Audience at Opera.

That "music hath charms" was evidenced by the acclaim of the magnificent audience. It was rather difficult, before the overture, to decide whether one were attending an opera or a fashion show. Society was there in representative numbers, diplomats and debutantes. Jewels flashed in the brightly lighted theater. Beautiful gowns of the women adding another note of color.

The Ambassador of Germany and Frau von Prittwitz und Gaffron held commanding interest. With them in their box were Frau Leitner, Mrs. Nordhoff-Jong, Mr. Sell and Frau Leip.

Mrs. Francis T. A. Junkin entertained in her box Mrs. M. S. Battle, Col. M. C. Buckey, Capt. Arnold Ruehman, of the German Navy and his wife, Princess Alexandra Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein.

Among others seen in the audience were Miss Helen Lee Eames Doherty, Senor Don Ramon Padilla, Mr. J. H. Reg Royen, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Bates Warren and Mrs. Reber Littlehales, and Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Mrs. Henry C. Pfeil, Mrs. W. F. Dennis, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Ham, Mrs. Robert E. Lee, and Commander Harlow.

There was behind Wood's independence more than self-assurance and self-will. It seemed to him ridiculous to treat medical graduates like school children, to keep them in leading-strings, subject them to petty tyranny and circumscribe their opportunities. That was no way to develop responsible minds. He was not the first to utter that protest. He was, in fact, merely developing into warfare the perpetual feud of internes against executives. The personality of Dr. Rowe merely aggravated a situation which existed in every hospital of any consequence. The house officers at the Massachusetts General looked upon Wood's defiance with sympathetic eyes; but, even as they wished him luck, they said he was a "damn fool" to risk so much for an abstract principle.

Dismissed From Hospital.

How much he was risking he found out when he was informed on August 20, 1884, that the board of trustees had put him on probation. A month later, without further warning, he was dismissed, charged with the operation, without permission, on a stricture with a dangerous instrument known as a Gouley catheter, and of taking grafts of skin from a boy's leg without asking the permission of his parents.

The first charge was false, as Dr. George Brewer, who had been with Wood during his examination of the patient, testified. The second, Wood admitted, explaining that the boy had volunteered with numerous others to give grafts to a puny child whose leg required the skin to cover a slough which had been slow to heal. The visiting surgeon, Dr. William F. Thorndike, Wood's chief on the medical side, refused to make a complaint and he urged the trustees to rescind their harsh judgment.

Dr. Wood, he said, had always proved himself an efficient, indefatigable and valuable house officer. The indiscretions charged against him seemed to him merely the result of overzeal and so slight that he would have been inclined to overlook them altogether.

Four or five other leading physicians on the visiting staff testified to the culprit's character and ability. But Dr. Rowe had made up his mind that Wood was an "unsafe man" and the trustees of the hospital refused to reconsider the case or to give Wood a hearing. The superintendent, happening to see Wood from the window as he went out of the gate, remarked: "There goes a young man who will never come to any good."

Faces Ouster With Courage.

Wood's dismissal was, for a man about to embark on a medical career, a disaster of the first magnitude. But he ignored the prospect of lifted eyebrows among his neighbors in Boston and in an office on Staniford street, established himself as a practicing physician.

Staniford street was a good location for a young doctor with an eye to the possibilities of the future as well as the exigencies of the present; for about it were the tenements from which immediate if scanty returns might be expected and on the farther side of Cambridge street began, though somewhat dingily, the respectability which culminated, beyond the golden dome of the statehouse, in the affluence of Beacon street.

Patients came slowly. Wood's landlord, who was a police captain, did his part by now and again bringing the doctor broken heads to mend, and his wife, in the doctor's absence, held with Irish blandishments possible sources of revenue. Wood's friends heard with mixed emotions of operations on old ladies in his district for cataract, and remarked that Wood had the nerve to try anything. But none of them heard of any complaints from the ladies.

Urged to Take Army Test.

A friend urged him to take the examinations for the Medical Corps of the Army.

"I am doing all I can get to do," Wood wrote Miss Haskell in February, 1886, "but think that I could do more if patients would only come. I paid expenses last month, lacking a few dollars, and I think that I shall do so in full this month.

"You will probably think that it is foolish, everybody does, when I tell you that I am going to try the Army examinations in March. If you do not approve of it, it may please you to know that I am perfectly confident that I shall 'get stuck,' for I have not had much time to grind and the ex. is a most rigid one. Let me know what you think of it. It means money at once and you know I am not very rich.

"I can not fully decide. One day I am anxious to get in, the next I am in doubt. You know what the life is—loaf, and get rusty. If I should go in for a few years and come out I should have to begin all over again. Coming out would probably be out of the question if I once get in."

He was thinking aloud. Miss Haskell responded promptly, encouraging and guiding.

"I think you have done exceedingly well to nearly pay your expenses in such a city of doctors, at the very start. Those who have become eminently successful in the end have often been obliged to wait many months before doing as well.

"About the Army appointment, I don't know. Plenty of money at the very beginning is quite tempting, I know, but you must go wherever you are assigned, I suppose, on the frontiers or anywhere, whether you will or nill, and your salary is your limit whatever that may be. 'Loaf and grow rusty'—I fear that would not satisfy your ambition. I do not believe it would. I am inclined to think your friends are right in judging it unwise, but—I am only a woman—and therefore not expected to know much about it."

Without telling any of his other friends, Wood slipped off to New York early in May and took the examinations.

"I am going into the Army," he wrote his former teacher definitely the end of May, "and am now waiting for my commission, which I shall not get until Congress meets. I went on to New York last April (27) and took the examinations, which lasted a week (six days), at about five hours per day. You can have no idea how severe they are. The general ex is worse than the professional, or as hard, and includes anything and everything they choose to ask, and requires Latin, mathematics, including geometry, ancient and modern history, English literature, also American; chemistry, physics. * * * This with an hour or so at the board constructing all sorts of imaginary optical instruments, solving problems, served to while away the hours and show one just how little a man could know, and live.

"Then came the long general examination on professional subjects, lasting three days. Then a day of oral ex. on the same subjects, then a day of operations. The general exam. was oral. * * * We get our commissions in the order of standing on the examination.

"Some say it is a foolish move, &c., others that it is a good thing. Of course, I belong to the latter party. What do you think? The rank at first is first lieutenant, which is one lift above the West Pointers, and promotion is rapid in the Medical Corps. The Government favors investigation and gives one everything to work with, &c. The pay amounts to about $2,500 per year, $1,600 in money and in addition, quarters, fuel, &c., which count up about $1,000 more."

Passes Test With Honors.

He passed the examination with flying colors, second in a group of 59. The surgeon general declared him an approved candidate for appointment as assistant surgeon in the United States Army, with the rank of first lieutenant.

But there was no vacancy. Meanwhile, would Dr. Wood take a contract as civilian assistant at $100 a month for service in Arizona? On May 17 the Apaches, under a notorious leader named Geronimo, had gone on the warpath, and doctors were needed to go with the troops. Wood required no further invitation. On June 13, 1885, he signed the contract. Ten days later he was on his way to the Southwest.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

ZASU PITTS

For many years in silent pictures, ZaSu was compelled to weep and die and she did both beautifully. Along came the microphone monster, changing many things, among them Miss Pitts' screen self.

If she tried to be seriously tearyeyed before the camera now, she'd be laughed at because every one expects her to be funny.

In fact, that very thing happened. When she was cast as the mother of the hero in "All Quiet On the Western Front," she began to believe that directors who'd been making her the "comedy relief" were mistaken.

The role was full of pathos, one that demanded and should get sympathy.

Turns to Comedy.

The war film was completed and previewed with ZaSu as the mother, but just a few days before another picture, "Honey," in which she had an extremely funny part, was shown.

So when she came on the screen in "All Quiet" snickers instead of silence was the greeting. The audience was looking for humor.

So her sequence was remade and another actress, Beryl Mercer, took Miss Pitts' place. She then was convinced that she might as well go on being funny and make the best of it.

Seeks to Please All.

The chronic question, "What is the matter with the movies?" has been given a new and intelligent answer by Louis Brock, who makes two-reel comedies.

Producer Brock recommends that pictures be segregated into four or five distinct classes rather than one class intended for mass appeal.

It is true, as he says, that Hollywood is attempting to please an American audience of 100,000,000 people, an admitted impossibility.

If Brock's plan were adopted, studios would make many medium-sized pictures with melodramatic, romantic, dramatic and comedy treatments, instead of trying to combine all these elements into a single film.

Big producers won't agree with Brock, because from their standpoint his idea is economically unsound which, after all, is the way cinematic art must be judged.

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

THE CAST.

Gail Redman ..... Harvey Stephens
Eve Redman ..... Zita Johann
Ella ..... Marie Bruce
Nicholas Hay ..... Herbert Marshall
Samuel Gillespie ..... Osgood Perkins
Jane ..... Adele Schuyler
Walter Burke ..... John T. Doyle
Christian Redman ..... Drew Price
Mary ..... Eileen Byron
Miss Frazer ... Mary Elizabeth Forbes

At the end of Mr. Philip Barry's new play, "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," which had its first appearance on any stage last night in the Belasco, a woman is called upon to make a great decision: Either she must elect to remain at home with her husband and her son by an interloper, her lover naturally or go out into the great world with the party of the third part. She stays at home. There is the play.

It takes three acts and nine scenes to work up to this point, and Mr. Barry—on the way—wrestles with many a problem in psychoanalysis. The play is beautifully written. It smacks sometimes of Pirandello, whose trick is to lay bare a human soul, and of O'Neill, who reads aloud the secrets of the heart, but always it is Barry, and at his best insofar as the writing is concerned—fresh, crisp dialogue that will dance and sparkle from the printed page. It certainly deserves a place in the library.

On the stage, however—even with the artistry of Zita Johann, who is admirably cast in the leading role—"Tomorrow and Tomorrow" betrays its frailty as a working drama; mostly because it is too delicately done—too sensitive, it seems. This probably is the cost of high art, as against the cheap and commercial. The same theme handled—or rather manhandled—for the work-a-day theater, per se, would undoubtedly command a record run on Broadway.

Mr. Barry has mighty good authority for his theme—the Bible. He quotes: "And it fell on a day that Elisha passed to Shunem, where was a great woman; and she constrained him to eat bread."

The scene is set in a little town in Indiana; the woman is Eve Redman, married to Gail Redman—a man interested in business. Comes that way a great lecturer—a doctor—and the Redmans put him up at their house. This scientist readily reads the yearning heart of Eve, who longs for a son.

That eternal triangle is not new, of course; nor are the types—Redman, who can not see beyond his nose, or his newspaper; the good wife who pens up her emotions; the traveling man who awakens her love. Barry treated it differently by going at it in whimsical fashion—and with kid gloves. Perhaps American audiences are not yet attuned to such poetic flights, having seen so many shady situations and scenes where the action fits the words and the words the action. Here, it is mostly a matter of beautiful lines, and thoughts, the magic moments in the play hidden behind laurel wreaths.

It may be that these shortcomings—merely from the standpoint of action, or inaction—will be ironed out in the process of making the play over; though the fundamentals are rigidly established. Certainly there are beautiful scenes, and three in particular, where Miss Johann rises to the heights predicted by those who have watched her steady ascendency to stardom. Without her, "Tomorrow and Tomorrow" would come off rather badly.

Gilbert Miller has Herbert Marshall, an English actor, cast as the professor who brings the awakening of love into the staid old Indiana homestead—and he does a manly job of it. Harvey Stephens is the rollicking, good-natured, typical husband who never knows what goes on in his own establishment. These three, admirably blended talents, are supported by a good cast that has nothing more to do than fill in the gaps—of which there are many. Osgood Perkins, who was the wiry managing editor in that hectic insight into newspaper life, "The Front Page," is here the docile secretary to the scientist, a part that enables him to carry off several of the Barryesque humors, jibes at humanity.

As usual, Mr. Barry has delved down pretty deep; a long ways under the surface and so his drama comes into the realm of the superserious; a tragedy, no less. Its best moments are its first and its last—the opening scene where a wife confides her secret yearnings to a husband, fast asleep during the recitation, and that final choice, home, or the ohtside world.

GAYETY

WRECKING IS BEGUN AT CENTER MARKET

125 Men Will Be Employed 4 Months in Demolishing Century Landmark.

SLAB TO BE PRESERVED

Old Center Market again was the scene of bustle and industry yesterday, but thrifty housewives and accomodating marketmen were replaced by a crew of wreckers. For the next four months they will be busy dismantling the century-old landmark to make way for the Government's triangle building program.

Workmen yesterday limited their activities to removing machinery and electrical equipment preparatory to actually tearing down the old structure. In two or three days, however, they will get around to removing the roof. The walls and superstructure will follow.

Hugo Herfurth, president of the salvaging company with which the Treasury Department has contracted for the wrecking, said approximately 125 men will be employed on the job, but that these and more already are available within his own organization.

He said he was undecided what will be done with the five-foot marble slab imbedded in the northwest wall of the red brick building, inscribed with a history of the old mart. If a new market is built in either southwest or northeast Washington, the tablet may be incorporated in the structure, he said. At all events it will be preserved for historical purposes, Mr. Herfurth said.

Arts Commission To Consider Plans

Will Confer With Mellon on State, War, Navy Building.

The Fine Arts Commission will consider several municipal architectural matters today and will confer with Secretary Mellon to remodel the State, War and Navy Building so as to be architecturally in keeping with the Treasury Department. A model of the south side of the structure has already been prepared.

Latest developments of the plans for the Masonic Memorial, as designed by Harvey Wiley Corbett, of New York, will be presented to the commission. Questions incidental to the completion of the Meridian Hill Park are also to be considered.

Proposals of statuary groups to be placed at the entrance to the Rock Creek and Potomac parkway approach and the terminus of the Arlington Memorial Bridge will be presented by Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, executive officer of the Arlington Memorial Bridge Commission. The commission will also take up placing markers at entrances to the District.

GIRL BANK ROBBER CAPTURED BY POSSE

DESTITUTION IS BLAMED

Monroe, Ohio, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Mrs. America Longworth, Franklin, Ohio, a 19-year-old mother, who said she needed money for her 7 months old baby, was surrounded today by a posse and captured in a woods near here with two young men companions soon after officers alleged the trio failed in an attempt to rob the Monroe National Bank.

Returned to Monroe after surrendering without a fight, the prisoners were identified by Austin Smith, 38, bank cashier, as the persons who tried to hold him up.

The girl's companions gave the names of Noel Craft, 16, and Rex Wierman, 20, both of Middletown.

Smith said one youth held a machine gun while the girl, carrying a revolver, approached the cashier's cage and demanded money. He said he pretended not to understand her request and that she fired at him, but the bullet flattened harmlessly against bulletproof glass. The cashier then fired three times and the robbers fled.

The fugitives' automobile was wrecked near here when it crashed into a culvert. A farm wagon saw the motorists run and called police. The latter organized a posse and found the trio hiding under a thicket in a woods.

Mrs. Longworth told police her husband was unemployed and she needed food and money for her baby.

Case Gain Shown By Travelers Aid

Report to Chest Says 25,100 Individuals Were Helped.

The Travelers Aid Society last year rendered aid in 25,100 cases, Mrs. Margaret Ford, executive secretary of the society, reported to the Community Chest yesterday. This figure represented an increase of more than 2,000 over the year previous, Mrs. Ford said.

Among the causes underlying requests for aid, unemployment showed the largest increase, according to the report. Last year 429 persons gave this as the cause for their trouble. Only 189 applied for aid on this account in 1929, it was stated.

Many requests for help unusual in nature were received by the society. Staff members frequently witnessed the marriage of young elopers, in compliance with messages from anxious parents who desired only to know their children were "really married." The usual number of runaways, both boys and girls, were reported.

Printer's Fortune Proves to Be Myth

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—And now it seems that Cornelius O'Brien, itinerant Irish linotype operator, isn't to inherit a fortune after all.

A search for him in America was started, rumors floated round that a half million dollars awaited him, and he was discovered here in a cheap rooming house, penniless.

The property is described in the legal document his attorney here received as a "plot of ground being part of the commons of Kilmainham." O'Brien's address in Ireland is given as 24 Reuben street, Dolphin's barn, Dublin.

Voluntary Bankruptcy Petition Filed by Shop

The Margaret Withers Shop, Inc., of 1332 Connecticut avenue northwest, through its officers, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to adjudge it a voluntary bankrupt. Liabilities of $6,935.90 and assets of $5,740.82 are listed.

At the same time Margaret Withers, who describes herself as manager of the shop, filed a voluntary petition, listing liabilities of $7,632.87 and assets of $3.75.

South Calcutta Man Accused of Murder Aid

Calcutta, India, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—P. A. J. Hackerdon, an Anglo-Indian resident of South Calcutta, was arrested at Alipore, today, charged with abetting the murder of Col. N. S. Simpson, inspector general of prisons, who was killed here December 8.

terest if they were published. This is the same position taken by President Hoover and Secretary Stimson last year when the Senate asked for the papers relating to the London naval treaty negotiations.

Several unsuccessful attempts have been made in the last four years in the Senate to force the withdrawal of Marines from Nicaragua. President Coolidge insisted that the troops be maintained there three years ago for the general election. Since that time they have been withdrawn gradually.

The United States had already indicated to Nicaragua that it would not supervise elections in that country after the one next year. Supervision for the election in 1928 and next year's was agreed to in an exchange of letters between the two countries.

The duties of the Marines in Nicaragua were summarized by the Secretary as guarding the American Legation, training the national guard of Nicaragua and protecting American lives and property.

Lima, Peru, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The newspaper El Comercio in an editorial today voiced sharp criticism of the American policy of intervention in Nicaragua, declaring it mistaken and unlikely to do any good service for pan-Americanism and international justice.

The editorial lauded the attitude of the United States senators who have demanded the withdrawal of American Marines from Nicaragua ended by praising the followers of Gen. Sandino, whom it calls "Liberty's soldiers."

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL

AT ONE of the most perfectly appointed luncheons to which the local press ever has been bidden, the management of the German Grand Opera Company yesterday introduced Mr. J. J. Vincent, managing director, to the music and dramatic critics of the National Capital in the presidential suite of the Willard Hotel.

Although perhaps a trifle out of place in this column, the event is mentioned here because when, and if, grand opera reaches the screen—and Mr. Sylvester Sullivan, special representative of the German Opera Company, foresees the filming and recording of the Wagner "Ring" operas with the world's finest voices in the principal roles and the Rocky Mountains as a suitable setting—it seems to me that the project will require some such dynamic personality as Mr. Vincent to insure its successful consummation.

While this young Russian has devoted his major interest and much of his life to grand opera, the highest form of theatrical entertainment we have, he nevertheless is keenly alive to all other manifestations of American amusement tastes and the methods by which they may best be served. It is his theory that opera in America will gain in popularity in direct proportion to the amount in which its cost to the patron can be reduced. It is this view that has made him almost as acute an observer of the trend of the cinema as, say, of the Metropolitan Opera. To him "Roxy" is no less real and potent a figure in American cultural development than Gatti-Casazza.

His present undertaking is to build up a company of American artists whose operatic endeavors will be devoted to the interpretation of German operas. It is from the origin of the works to be sung, and not from the personnel of the company, that the German Opera Company derives its name. At the present time all-American casts are not possible, but within ten years—the period he allots himself for the considerable task he has shouldered—Mr. Vincent is sure they will be.

In the meantime, he perceives an appreciable aid in another of Mr. Rothafel's innovations at his Roxy Theater in New York—the Sunday morning broadcasts of the foremost Wagnerian music by an orchestra of 200 musicians, to be begun next Sunday at 11.

A great many, however, will coincide with Mr. Vincent's view that there is a maximum instrumentation beyond which a useful symphony orchestra may not advantageously venture. Two hundred instruments seems a bit above the number essential to best effect, especially in the diminuendos and pianissimos.

It is only necessary to converse a moment or two with Mr. Vincent to know that in his practical view there is a closer affinity than is usually conceded between grand opera and much that is presented in those magnificent temples of entertainment dedicated primarily to the motion picture.

It may be of interest, in passing, that Mr. Vincent was born Jan Jacques Vischnevski in Sevastopol, on the shores of the Black Sea in Crimea, and educated at the University of Petrograd. He began his operatic career as a musician, having studied piano, violin and French horn.

When the war broke out in 1914, he served as a lieutenant in the czar's army and won promotion on the Austrian front. In 1919 he married Julie Hudak, premiere danseuse of La Scala, Milan, who was then appearing in Budapest. He speaks six languages and has been a resident of the United States for seven years.

Speaking of musi.. Ron and Don, the West Coast twins of the console, concluded their long engagement at the local Fox Theater last night and departed for Brooklyn, where they will take up the organ work at the Fox Theater on Friday, exchanging places with Bob West, who returns to F street the same day.

In the interim, Sylvia Kaplowitz, well-known to radio audiences as a former piano partner of Milton Davis, organist at the Earle, will preside over the console at the Fox, beginning this morning and continuing through Thursday.

Mrs. Kaplowitz, in addition to being a musician of prominence in the Capital, as Sylvia Klavans was at one time a well-known dancer, who achieved many professional successes in partnership with Ruth Bennett, now Mrs. Samuel Boyd, wife of the Washington attorney.

The Fox console will never have boasted so decorative an artist.

And still speaking of music, Jules Bledsoe was greeted with no less than cyclones of applause for his renditions of "Ol' Man River" and the Toreador's song from "Carmen" at the Palace performance I attended Saturday afternoon, but it was Billy Rupprecht, the torrid-toned and tricky-tempoed trumpeter of the Palais Syncopators, who really stopped the show. I mean stopped it.

A repetition of "My Baby Just Cares for Me," and "St. Louis Blues" for an encore number after that was nowhere near enough for the ravenous crowd, and Allan Rogers was forced to put the next number on unannounced to keep the unit within hailing distance of its scheduled running time.

That mention of "schedule" reminds me that unless all present signs fail—and it will probably turn out that they do—the downtown, first-run houses this week will get back on their regular schedules of Friday and Saturday openings without any more of this disconcerting Wednesday-Thursday-Friday-Saturday business, occasioned by the way the holidays fell this year.

If it were necessary to select a screen actor to whom the advent of dialogue has been more disastrous than to any other who has managed to stay in the running, I suspect that my nomination would be Gary Cooper. Ever since the leading man of "Morocco," current at the Palace, began to talk from the silver sheet I have been waiting for him to deliver a really poised and effective performance. I am still waiting—not that it matters.

A lively discussion has been precipitated, it seems, by the Paramount production of "Tom Sawyer," recently seen here. The particular points in controversy are how old and how tough was Tom.

Some contend that their mental picture of Tom is of a lad about 16 years old; others, of a youngster not more than 10 or 12. One faction insists that Master Sawyer was a very tough egg; another that he was merely mischievous and supersensitive to certain slights.

You may, of course, write your own ticket, but as one who has not read the Mark Twain story for a great many years, it still seems to me that Tom must have been young enough to make his solution of the problem of whitewashing the fence seem an inspired burst of juvenile genius, his slamming around of little Sidney something less than brutal, and his wooing of Becky Thatcher considerably less mature than adolescent. Ten or 12 would seem about right—maybe a day or two younger.

And it has never been my notion that Tom Sawyer was the Mickey (himself) McGuire of his day. A slightly older Skippy would be more my idea.

And how many times have YOU written it "1930?"

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—A runaway youth and a girl from Babylon, Long Island, held at Laurel pending the arrival of an officer and their parents, told State police today they started South in their automobile because the car broke down Friday night and it was so late they were afraid to go home.

The two, Joseph Boettger, 17, son of Herman S. Boettger, general superintendent of the Long Island Park Commission, and Marjorie La Masa, 16, also of Babylon, were arrested late yesterday after a short chase by State police, who had been notified to be on the lookout for the pair.

The work will probably take a year. Congress has appropriated $25,000 for the survey and has indicated that more will be forthcoming if necessary. Mr. Barber comes from Boston.

STUDENTS RETURN TO SCHOOLS IN CITY

EARLY HEARINGS SEEN

School days started again yesterday for 78,611 Washington children who thronged the corridors and classrooms of the District public schools, for the last half of the school year. Plans will be made immediately for commencement exercises for the midyear graduates at the end of this month.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of District schools, the assistant superintendents and members of the Board of Education are preparing to appear before the subcommittee on appropriations of the House. They are expected to be called before the committee late this week or early next week.

The school officials will present reasons for the appropriation asked in the new budget. Representative Simmons, chairman of the subcommittee, is expected to offer criticism of the management of school affairs, but the school authorities are prepared to reply to any attacks made and will present statistics and other data to support the manner in which schools have been operated in the past two years, it was learned.

The meeting of the Board of Education tomorrow afternoon will be enlivened, it is expected, with a discussion of the recent comment on school affairs by Representative Simmons. Another matter of interest that may be presented at the meeting will be a report from the school superintendent in regard to appointment of a president for the Wilson Teachers College. Dr. Ballou recently made a trip to various cities to interview persons under consideration for the position.

What England Did in 1920 United States Can Do Today

The United States has not yet learned the value of taking a loss; England has. Therein lies a fundamental difference between Europe and North America; therein lies the stumbling block to an early war debt moratorium and therefore to an early return of world prosperity.

In 1920, when chaos stalked Europe and civilization was tottering, the world gasped at England's manly attempt to straighten things out by England proposing a war debt settlement out of all proportion to her moral liability or her ability to pay. But that proposed settlement was SOMETHING; it was THE SOMETHING on which world financial reconstruction could be started; it was THE SOMETHING which restored world confidence; it was THE SOMETHING which started world trade moving, and it was THE SOMETHING which enabled millions of starving mouths in Austria, Germany and Europe to eat.

And let no American living be under misapprehension, England's war debt gesture in 1920 was the something which started and made possible the unparalleled American prosperity of the past ten years.

By taking big losses in 1920, England laid the foundation for reconstruction of world finances; this brought ten years of world prosperity, a major part of which was shared by United States.

The years 1930 to 1940 can be made as profitable as the years 1920 to 1930, only if America now tackles world finances and does for the world what England did ten years ago.

To a Yankee, as to every new or primitive people, it's a disgrace to take a loss, or take a licking; whether in sport or finance or morals, the American demands the impossible 100 per cent perfection; he simply must win. The philosophy that sport and business and morals and life are combinations of wins and losses must not be admitted. Does this explain the wide gulf between the hypocrisy of "official" and "publishing" America on one hand, and on the other hand the wholesomeness and worth of most Americans as individuals?

United States must soon learn and publicly admit the philosophy that the least interesting part of business, of sport, of a journey, or of life, is its destination, the end—death.

England's greatness was built by taking losses. In centuries of colonization and pioneering and financing, losses were part of England's life. When colonies and nations and states, including Southern United States, were unable to pay, or defaulted in their obligations, England, like a big business man dealing with a customer, did not get sore and demand the last penny, or refuse to do business. In the case of defaulting states, England knew that the good will and continuity of trade of a growing United States would finally yield more profit to her than a few million lost in debts.

International debts can only be cleared in goods or in gold. In 1920 when Europe in payment of war debts undertook in round figures to send to America 70 million sterling per year in goods or gold, they undertook something which common sense now shows they never could do. But it was a start; it was, as it has been for centuries, the imperfect attainable something which all practical men accept for the idealistic unattainable.

To Europe's burden is added the fact that when the undertaking was made, goods and gold had a certain value. Today those goods are worth 50c on the dollar, and customs and other restrictions of getting them into America have doubled; gold can not be procured at any price.

Today, in considering war debts, Americans should ponder this. If European and world stability brought mounting prosperity to United States from 1920 to 1930, what will stagnant trade, world chaos and instability bring United States in the ten years from 1930 to 1940?

Americans should understand that today, as ten years ago, in 1920, the world stands on the brink of either financial chaos, or another era of economic prosperity. In the resuscitation of world trade, and especially in the rehabilitation of Asia's one billion population lies a path of financial progression that will easily equal, if not excel, the prosperous era of the last ten years. That prosperity will make the postponement, the writing down or writing off of a few million of war debts seem trivial.

But to do this requires world vision and world statesmanship from America, because world finances have got to be reconstructed. If the reverse of this policy is adopted, a taste of what is in store for United States can be gleaned from the fact that her income in 1929 was 90 billions; 1930 income is now estimated at 70 billions. So great is even this reduced income that it approaches in total the combined recorded income of the rest of the world.

But what will happen to this colossal income, what will happen to the New York stock board and to Western civilization's capital structure the day that world trade foundations and confidence in European credit and in the British Pound Sterling start slipping, as they are today?

Will Russia care? Will Moscow object if America's annual income drops from 70 to 30 or even to 20 billion, and if American plumbers and carpenters are reduced from $6 to $2 or $1 per day? Will Russia protest if Canadian coal, newsprint and salmon drop to half and quarter their present prices?

What loud-mouthed isolationists on this continent forget in their selfish boastings of wealth and independence of world conditions, is that our Western civilization and capitalism is grounded on paper values that are every day taking flight. What will happen to those American capital structures the moment world confidence goes; then people have to return to fundamental trade and barter values like those of 1900, or like Russia today?

Woodrow Wilson told America that if she wanted to be internationally great in trade, in money and in culture, she would have to be internationally great in her thinking and in her politics. Woodrow Wilson's idealism of interdependence and world-unity may have been in advance of the necessities of the world of 20 years ago; but that idealism in practice and in action is vital to the world civilization of today and certainly vital to the economic and financial America of today.

What England did for the world in 1920, United States can do today. Will she?

Westbrook Pegler Says

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Some recent remarks of mine regarding the lack of originality in college football songs have evoked protests from sentimental alumni. The criticism was general, holding that in many cases the music has been calmly lifted from old songs and that the lyrics, as a whole, do not reflect much credit on the English departments, being inartistic and very often technically incorrect.

Not too certain of my ground in the matter of the original sources of the music, I consulted a composer, who, like all composers, keeps on hand a library of old English and German village roundelays, hymns and picnic songs. These works are used for reference, be it said, and not under any circumstances for imitation or inspiration, although it is strange that in the popular commercial music of the day a strong similarity to the old songs frequently is detectable to the well-informed ear.

I find that the composer of music makes a distinction between the adoption and the adaptation of an old air, and perceive that this art enjoys a conscience much more tolerant than that of the writing profession. It is true that Shakespeare frankly lifted and adorned the plots of other writers, but Shakespeare lived a long time ago and the ethics and the copyright laws of the present time would not approve if he were to do the same sort of thing today.

OLD WORKS PLAYED TO FRAZZLE

The journeyman composer, however, one fingering the keyboard in his cell in the assembling plants of the music firms on Tin Pan Alley these days, fabricating ephemeral music for the presses like a rewrite man doing police stories for a daily newspaper, regards the composition of the masters and of forgotten minstrels as his to select from. A mere change of time may be accepted as complete and original authorship.

To name the college songs which are traceable to old airs would be to arouse the old grads again and bring down upon my sensitive nature denunciations of a severity which the old grad alone is capable of. Therefore I shall name no names, thus avoiding controversy, but I may say that a little research in this line will call the turn on a number of airs which college crowds sing as their anthems or fight songs.

In fact, I don't believe that the colleges which sing their loyalty to the airs of "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," "The Wearin' o' the Green" and an old, familiar hymn, the name of which I have been unable to learn, would deny the sources of this music. They have frankly adopted old pieces and the airs have been sung for their purposes by so many generations of students that they have come to regard them as characteristic and traditional.

PLAGIARISM WOULD NOT BE DENIED

The suggestion as to this is merely that there should be among 20 or 50 successive classes of students some composers of sufficient art and enthusiasm to devise original and distinctive songs without recourse to the works of others. The thing can be done, for it has been done artistically by students who attended the University of Wisconsin, Princeton and Knox College, to name a few, but it is not done often.

One of the alumni who wrote to disagree with my other essay on the subject speaks feelingly of college loyalty and the exciting warmth of the old, traditional football rivalries. I recognize the reality of these factors, and, considering the vigor of this loyalty and these rivalries, I suggest that it is strange that they do not inspire the young musicians to create stirring compositions voicing the spirit of their schools. Surely there are musicians in the schools above the artistic rank of the saxophonists and trap drummers of those dance orchestras which call themselves So and So's Collegians.

But when a Midwestern university ran a competition to select an original varsity song some time ago, one of the entrants, an alumnus some years out of school, sketched his notion of a varsity air on paper and sent it on to a professional composer of his acquaintance with a request that he whip it into shape to win the honor. The composer did his best, but he had no sentimental interest in the college, which was not his own alma mater, and the piece

College Heads Give Sports More Aid

Learn Necessity of Careful Scrutiny of Athletics.

Subsidizing, Recruiting Being Erased in Middle West.

By CHARLES GRUMICH.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Increased interest and vigilance of college officials, in the opinion of several Middle Western sports authorities, has diminished subsidization and recruiting. The twin evils charged against college athletics in the Carnegie report more than a year ago.

Some leaders in the Big Six Conference, which recently was in turmoil over accusations against the "simon purity" of athletics at the member University of Kansas, held to the belief that publication of the Carnegie reports had inculcated in professors and presidents consciousness of the ills arising from a policy of "win at any cost."

Others say there has been little or no effect from the expose of the investigators, who concluded that every seventh college athlete in the Nation was subsidized and that coaches "went shopping" for their talent.

Officials' Attention Gained By Carnegie Report.

The general belief expressed was that the exhaustive Carnegie survey, a year later, seems to have brought home to university and college officials a necessity for careful scrutiny of their own athletic personnel, or of others.

A concrete example was seen in the charges brought by Prof. W. A. Tarr, of the University of Missouri, that the University of Kansas was guilty of proselyting and professionalism, in the degree labeled subsidization.

Dr. Tarr, a new representative in the ruling big six council of professors, conducted a one-man sleuthing expedition into Kansas last fall and prosecuted the charges before his colleagues.

The powerful faculty body voted to ostracize Kansas after this year but a few weeks later rescinded its order after the Kansas athletic board banished James A. Bausch, all around athlete, under a clarifying interpretation of subsidization adopted by the big six faculty men and college and university presidents.

More Investigations Is General Cry.

Kansas promised to accept the rulings of the conference eligibility committee, which will meet on the Jayhawkers' home grounds January 9 to consider the cases of ten to twenty other athletes accused of having been lured to or subsidized by the university, directly or indirectly.

Murmurs of resentment emanated from the Kansas campus. The general cry was, "let's investigate the other big six schools, too."

Mike Ahearn, veteran athletic director for the Kansas Aggies, asserts "there have been no changes in our attitude toward subsidizing and recruiting since publication of the Carnegie report."

It is recalled significantly that Bill Meisinger, an Aggie athlete, was summarily found ineligible by his school authorities when they discovered he received a salary from an insurance company head for future service as farm manager.

The same insurance man employed Bausch at Kansas as a salesman for $75 monthly and this was found to constitute subsidization.

Presidents, Faculties Now Interested.

C. L. Brewer, athletic director at Missouri, says the most evident development since publication of the Carnegie report is "that university presidents, faculty members and athletic authorities have all become generally more interested in a wholesome attitude toward athletics."

"Entire college faculties," he as-

WALTER STARKE, a 33-year-old Saxon, was the first man in history to travel from Insbruck to Berlin on skis and his feat would have been impossible but for the prolonged cold weather of 1929. Starke's journey took him through the Bavarian forests, the Black forest, Frankonia and the Thuringian forest and is more remarkable because of the extreme cold.

"Tiny Mite" is really a full grown horse—a South American stallion, and he has traveled the world over, appearing in theaters, circuses and sideshows as the smallest horse in the world. He is now 29 years old and weighs only 97 pounds. "Tiny Mite" is now retired on the farm of George P. Getz, at Holland, Michigan.

Equipoise 6-1 Winter Book Favorite

Jamestown, Vanderpool Are Held at 20-1 for Test.

By ORLO ROBERTSON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Its a long cry from January's wintry blasts to the Kentucky Derby, but already the future books are forecasting that C. V. Whitney's Equipose will be out in front when the turf's best 3-year-olds thunder past the judges' stand at Churchill Downs on Saturday, May 16.

Thoroughbred trainers say a thousand things may happen to keep Equipose from even facing the barrier in the Blue Grass classic, but the winter bookmakers nevertheless have established the Whitney ace as the 6 to 1 favorite. Very little wagering is reported, however, as few care to risk their money before the eligible list appears the latter part of February.

Equipoise ranked as one of the greatest of the 1930 crop of 2-year-olds, winning 8 of his 17 starts to top the juvenile division in money earned with $156,835. He proved a sturdy runner, campaigning from early April to late October over tracks of three States and winning at all distances.

Fastest Mile by Twenty Grand.

With a record of having run the fastest mile in the history of 2-year-old racing, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twenty Grand holds second place in the winter books. He is quoted at 8 to 1. The speedy son of St. Germans—Bonus stepped the mile in 1:36 to win the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes, defeating among others the derby favorite. Equipoise turned the tables in the Pimlico Futurity, however, when the two colts were brought together at even weights.

Although generally acclaimed as the 2-year-old champion, George D. Widener's Jamestown is being held at 15 to 1, while some books are offering as high as 20 to 1. The great son of St. James, winner of the rich Saratoga Stakes and the Belmont Futurity, had only one defeat to mar his 1930 record, but there is some doubt as to whether he will start in the Derby. Although not generally known, the Widener youngster was bothered with weak legs all through the season.

Unbeaten Vanderpool Rated 20 to 1.

The only unbeaten colt slated to start in the Derby will be the Tennessee Stable's Vanderpool. Despite the fact he never stepped out of sprint classes in winning eleven consecutive races, he is considered a good proposition at 20 to 1, especially out in the Blue Grass country. A. C. Bostwick's Mate, which improved during the late season racing, is held at the same figure.

If the get of Sir Gallahad II are to follow in the footsteps of Gallant Fox, it will depend on the ability of Insco, winner of the Post and Paddock Stakes at Arlington Park, and William Woodward's Ormesby, a stablemate of the mighty 1930 Derby winner. Neither were good enough to rank among the 30 leading money winners of the past year, but they showed signs of developing, and Sir Gallahad's offspring are famous for their improvement as 3-year-olds.

Insco is quoted at 20 to 1 by Western bookmakers and longer odds in the East, while one may write out his own ticket on Ormsby and the remainder of the probable starters.

Tilden Seeks To Enlist 2 Stars

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—George M. Lott, jr., a member of the United States 1930 Davis Cup Tennis Team, has turned down a proposition to turn professional and become a member of the Bill Tilden-Karel Kozeluh indoor tour, which opens in New York, February 18.

Lott, formerly of Chicago and now a resident of this city, said today, "I have definitely turned down an offer to become a part of the professional tour. I am really not interested. Tilden spoke to me about it in his recent visit here.

"John Van Ryn, one of my 1930 Davis Cup teammates, was also mentioned in connection with the tour, but I believe he feels the same way about it as myself. We are planning to play in the Canadian indoor championships at Montreal the middle of January and may compete in several more indoor tournaments this winter."

Van Ryn, the former Princeton star, who was approached, said: "I am still an amateur and will continue as such. Lott and myself will play singles in Canada and also doubles. The Tilden tour does not appeal to me."

Wear to Resign Davis Cup Post. He Tells Paper

NEW YORK, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The New York Times says Joseph W. Wear, of Philadelphia, will resign as chairman of the Davis Cup committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association because of pressure of business.

The Davis Cup chairman has not yet presented his resignation to the U. S. L. T. A., the newspaper says, but has announced his intention to do so. He also will suggest Fitz-Eugeen Dixon as his successor. Dixon was nonplaying captain of the 1930 Davis Cup Team and is a member of the Davis Cup committee.

Wear was selected as chairman of the committee in February of 1928, succeeding Julian S. Myrick, of New York.

Camp Wins Again; Adds to Cue Lead

New York, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Marcel Camp, of Detroit, increased his lead in the interstate pocket billiards championship tournament tonight by defeating Bennie Allen, of Kansas City, 125 to 118, in twelve innings. It was Camp's fifth straight victory. Arthur Woods, of Pawtucket, R. I., holds second place with three wins and no defeats.

Tony Plansky Starts As Williams Coach

Ruch New President Of Philly Nationals

Philadelphia, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Lewis C. Ruch, vice president of the Philadelphia National League Baseball Club, was elected president at a meeting of the club's board of directors today. He succeeds William F. Baker, who died recently in Montreal.

Douglass Nicholson was elected vice president; Gerald P. Nugent, business manager; Robert F. Irwin, jr., secretary, and M. M. Nugent, treasurer and assistant secretary.

A statement was issued saying that "the business affairs of the club are in excellent condition and, with the addition of new players, the prospects of a winning baseball club for the coming season are very bright."

Midwinter Golf Play Starts at Miami Today

Jimmy West, of Atlanta and now of Miami, will lead the crowd of nonprofessionals in qualifying to play as he defends his 1930 title. Match play will start Wednesday and continue through Saturday.

Tournament officials said today they expected more than 100 perspective qualifiers, and hoped to send six flights of 16 golfers from the tees Wednesday.

BRITISH ACE IMPRESSES CRITICS

ORANGEBURGH, N. Y., Jan. 5 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Len Harvey, middleweight champion of Europe, went through a short workout for the benefit of a bevy of critics at Gus Wilson's training camp here today. Len was out to make a great showing, for the photographers were there in droves, and they were plentifully supplied with flashlight powder. Harvey picked out two of the toughest sparring partners he could find. They were Pal Silvers and Izzy Grove.

Before the training jousts Silvers and Grove tossed a coin to see which should go on first with the European title holder. Izzy, smart fellow that he is, won the toss and elected to go on last. Neither Pal Silvers nor Izzy Grove is a push-over for any man's fighter.

Silvers boxed one round and in that time he took a severe battering about the body. This fellow from abroad is a good body punisher, one of the best with a short snappy left uppercut in the clinches. He did a lot of work in close, and it looked as if he were schooling himself for one of those close, infighting battles.

Harvey is a fast, clean fighter. He doesn't fight like the conventional Englishman we have been used to. One thing, he doesn't seem to wilt under a body punch. He showed a most disconcerting left uppercut to the body when he boxed with Pal Silvers for one round, and it was a pretty long round at that.

He showed the same punch against Grove, and Izzy is one of the cagiest of all the middleweights when he wants to be. Izzy, by the way, has taken up fighting seriously again, because he lost most of his money in what he calls the recent panic.

After the bout Grove testified that Harvey hits a harder punch than Vince Dundee, whom he is to battle here in his debut. As Grove has fought Vince Dundee on several occasions, this is testimony that can be taken for what it is worth.

"He looks like a good fighter to me," she said, "but I only hope he gets a real chance here in America. I am sure he will, for other English fighters who have come here have been given an opportunity. And my husband really is a champion, whereas, the others were not."

Harvey's trainer is a little Englishman who has trained many prominent fighters, among them Tommy Burns. The trainer's name is Archie Shortland Watson, but he is satisfied to be caled "Wat." The trainer explained that the fighter's "tack" was stolen just before he left England, and he was forced to purchase an entirely new set of ring paraphernalia when he arrived in this country.

Conley, Notre Dame, Will Coach La Salle

Midwinter Amateur Draws Florida Golfers

Jimmy West, formerly of Atlanta and now of Miami, will lead the crowd of nonprofessionals in qualifying to play, as he defends his 1930 title. Match play will start Wednesday and continue through Saturday.

Tournament officials said today they expected more than 100 prospective qualifiers, and hoped to send 6 flights of 16 golfers from the tees Wednesday.

West, who also is Florida amateur champion, will offer a determined opposition to any club swingers seeking to topple him from the throne he assumed last year after a tough battle with H. M. Brice, another Miamian. Brice is entered this year.

Wisconsin Triumphs Over Illinois, 12 to 9

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Wisconsin got away to a victorious start tonight, defeating Illinois, 12 to 9, in the inaugural of the Western Conference basket ball season.

The contest was a bitter defensive affair, with the Badgers holding Illinois to two field goals, both of which were scored in the second period. Chuck Harper, Illini captain, scored the first point of the game, a foul goal, after seven minutes of the first half, and Illinois did not count again until after four minutes of the final frame.

ALABAMA'S GRID HEROES HONORED

Tuscaloosa Wildly Welcomes Conquering Eleven.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Alabama's Crimson Tide rolled home today to the cheers of 6,000 admirers and the blare of four bands.

Citizens, students, college professors, locomotive and factory whistles made the welkin ring for the Tide that submerged Washington State's Cougars, 24 to 0, in Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., New Year's Day. It was Alabama's third invasion of the Pcific Cost and its second victory. The other game ended in a tie.

The Tide, riding on wagons drawn by students and citizens, headed a procession to Memorial Flagpole in the center of the city for a formal welcome, then out University avenue to the campus, where at the historic "mound" the ceremonies closed.

Seldom has Tuscaloosa turned loose with such utter abandon as today, when venerable professional and business men screamed themselves hoarse in adding to the din that even a drizzle of rain could not temper.

At the "mound" the team members had their way and Freddie Sington, all-American tackle, told how it was done. "We saw 68 000 people and a group of big red devils and just gave them the works," he said.

Bruder, Northwestern Football Star, Weds

Waukegan, Ill., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Henry "Hank" Bruder, Northwestern University football star, and Miss Omega Gilbert, of Evanston, Ill., were married here Sunday afternoon by Justice of the Peace Wilfred Hall.

French Middle Distance Stars Will Invade U. S. Next Month

NEW YORK, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—An invitation extended by the Amateur Athletic Union for a French invasion of American indoor tracks in February has been accepted on behalf of Seraphin Martin and Paul Keller, two sensational middle distance runners.

In announcing the receipt today of a cablegram of acceptance from the French Athletic Federation, Daniel J. Perris, secretary of the A. A. U., said it was expected that the two visitors would appear in half a dozen Eastern meets, including the National A. A. U. championships at Madison Square Garden February 25.

Martin created a sensation just before the 1928 Olympics by being clocked in the world's record time of 1:50 3-5 for 800 meters. Subsequently he pulled a tendon and failed to accomplish anything in the international competition at Amsterdam.

For some reason, his record was not accepted but he won the French 800-meter title in 1929 in very fast time.

The French pair will be the first visiting athletes to come under the new regulation of the International Amateur Athletic Federation limiting athletic invasions to 21 days, measured from time of arrival to time of departure. This regulation was the result of difficulties growing out of the extended tours of such stars as Charles Hoff, of Norway, and Paavo Nurmi, of Finland.

Ray Kennedy to Pilot Columbia, Reported

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The Columbia Record said today that Ray Kennedy, former manager of Charlotte and Asheville, Sally League Clubs, has been signed to manage the Columbia Club in 1931.

Commenting on the decision of the Pittsburgh Pirates to withdraw their support from the local club, the Record says "it is believed a local purchaser will be procured at an early date."

Court Rules Golf Club Stock Is Initiation Fee

New York, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—In a decision described as important to golfers and clubmen, the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals ruled today that E. O. Munn was correctly assessed $450 on his purchase of two shares of stock of the Deepdale Golf Club, at Great Neck.

The assessment was made under a provision of the revenue act taxing initiation fees 10 per cent. Federal agents said golf and social clubs have adopted the practice of selling stock to prospective members since the tax became operative.

John G. Jackson, counsel for the United States Golf Association, appeared for Mr. Munn and argued the money paid was not an initiation fee. The court held, however, that it was "a condition precedent to membership" in the club.

Capablanca, Dr. Euwe Gain in Title Chess Play

Hastings, England, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Jose R. Capablanca, of Cuba, and Dr. Max Euwe, of Holland, who are close on the heels of M. Sultan Khan, of India, in the international tournament at the Hastings Chess Festival, both scored victories in the seventh round today. Capablanca won from Winter, of London, in 34 moves, and Dr. Euwe defeated Colle, of Belgium, in 32 moves. The game between the two Englishmen, Tylor and Michell, was won by Tylor in 35.

In the two unfinished games Yates, of England, was a pawn up with Sultan Khan and Miss Menchik, of Czechoslovakia, had the better position against Sir George Thomas.

Tip S., Setter, Wins In All-American Trials

Holly Springs, Miss., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Tip S., owned and handled by C. E. Dufield, of Tulsa, Okla., won the amateur championship of the All-America Field Trials Club here today, with Brighthurst Lady Ghost, owned by R. W. Wallace, jr., of Jackson, Miss., and handled by Henry P. Davis, of Memphis, annexing runner-up honors. Both dogs are setters.

Tip S. and Lady Ghost fought it out for the title in a two-hour final heat this afternoon. Tip S. gained the advantage by his bird-finding ability, making three points on bevies. Lady Ghost found only one, but, like her competitor, ran the two-hour heat in good form. Six dogs competed.

The Derby, in which nineteen dogs are entered, will be run as the second event of the trials tomorrow.

Catholic High Court Tourney Again Planned

Chicago, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Loyola University will hold its eighth annual national Catholic interscholastic basket ball tournament this year, disapproval of the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations and the North Central Conference of Colleges and Secondary Schools nothwithstanding.

The Rev. George E. Kiley, S. J., Loyola athletic director, tonight announced March 18 to 22, inclusive, as the dates for the classic.

Following the discontinuance of the University of Chicago national prep basket ball tournament two weeks ago, it was believed Loyola would abandon its event. Father Kiley said the tournament would be renewed to meet requests "of countless Catholic high schools throughout the country."

Benny Bass Defeats Massey; Keeps Title

Tonight's bout was fought along the same lines as marked a nontitle battle between the Philadelphia boys six weeks ago, Bass winning the verdict. Benny's heavy cannonading to the body slowed up the challenger after the first few rounds, and it required all Massey's boxing skill to escape a knockout punch in the closing sessions. A capacity crowd of 10,000 saw the battle.

Massey, a faster starter than the stocky Bass, was at his best in the first three rounds and they battled along on comparatively even terms. A left jab and a right uppercut bothered the champion for a time, but when he found he could take all that Massey had to offer, he showed a willingness to take a punch in order to work in close and hammer away at Massey's midsection.

Minnesota-Harvard Grid Game Plans Fail

Minneapolis, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Prospects for a football game between the University of Minnesota and Harvard, frequently mentioned, were characterized as a "dead issue" today by Herbert O. Crisler, athletic director of the Gopher school. Similarly, he said, hockey games with Eastern schools will not materialize.

Crisler made his statement after a two weeks' trip to the East, during which he sought to build up athletic relations between Minnesota and schools in that region. He ascribed failure of his efforts to apprehensions existing in the East about football conditions.

Eastern schools, he said, have proposed one reform after another for football and are "standing still" in regard to schedules for future years because of their uncertainty as to what will develop from these proposals.

MORGAN, INDIANS, QUITS AS PLAY BOY TO HIT .350

Given Chance By Injury to Fonseca

Danced Way Through Baseball in College and Minors.

FOR the past several years the "theme song" of practically every major league manager has been based on his club's need of "another right-handed hitting outfielder," and one of the biggest disappointments at the Washington training camp at Biloxi last spring was the Nationals' failure to land Eddie Morgan in a deal with the Cleveland Indians after it appeared that the two clubs had just about reached an agreement.

Just what Manager Johnson would have had to give for Morgan is not known, but it is known that Business Manager Billy Evans, of the Tribe, and Clark Griffith, Washington Club owner, were just on the verge of closing a deal when Evans suddenly decided to keep Morgan.

Morgan had been regarded as just a play-boy by the Cleveland Club. He was playing baseball because he liked baseball better than anything else in the world and, at the same time, he did not intend to allow his business to interfere with his pleasure when off the field. As the Indians had several other good fly chasers available last spring they were willing to listen to a proposition from the Washington Club until, for some unknown reason—possibly a "hunch"—they suddenly called off all negotiations.

Morgan Changes Over Night.

But, while a play-boy, perhaps, at the beginning of the season, there was no more serious-minded member of the Peckinpaugh team than was this same Morgan soon after the schedule started. He shifted practically over night. In fact, the big change in Eddie's life came when Lew Fonseca was crippled in a collision with Art Shires and put out of the game for several months.

"Eddie, you have got to play first base until Lew is ready again," said Manager Roger Peckinpaugh, last spring.

But when Lew was ready there was no chance for him to regain possession of first base, as Morgan not only had developed as an excellent guardian of the sack, but was setting new records for Cleveland batsmen for all time, first by making 26 home runs and then by driving in 136 runs, thus ranking just behind such famed tally drivers as Lou Gehrig, Al Simmons, Jimmy Foxx, Babe Ruth and Leon Goslin. Eddie also led the Indians by scoring 122 runs.

Made Good Despite Late Hours.

When Eddie was the star batsman of the Tulane University baseball team, they tell a story about Eddie's playboy proclivities. The varsity coach and manager, knowing that Eddie would break training at the slightest opportunity, figured on keeping him in his room in an Atlanta hotel the night before the big game of the season with Georgia Tech. To do so, they locked all the doors of the rooms occupied by the players at 9 p. m. and left orders that none was to receive any callers.

"There," said the coach, "I guess we have Eddie Morgan fixed so he will not dance all night."

Then, after attending a movie, the two sat in a secluded part of the hotel lobby where they could watch the elevator.

"One o'clock, coach. Time to go to bed," said the manager, thus giving several Tulane grads the tip that it was time also for them to depart.

What's more, he did. Three hits in four times at bat, including two for extra bases.

Failed to Take Game Seriously.

Well, for two years, or until he was installed as the regular first sacker of the Indians, Eddie persisted in treating major-league baseball just as seriously as he had his college sports. If he wanted to dance or motor until morning, that was all right. In fact, he could not figure it affected his playing, as he batted .354 for New Orleans and .313 and .318 in his first two years as an Indian.

Eddie probably knows different now, for once he was brought in from the outfield and parked at first base, he proceeded to forget about dancing and late hours. Even went so far as to almost challenge Joe Sewell for the early-to-bed honors on the Cleveland Team.

In fact, Manager Peckinpaugh, along in August, remarked there were two Indians who never left the hotel at night—Joe Sewell and Eddie Morgan. And Eddie's batting average jumped to .350, it being excelled by only six American League batsmen.

Just a year ago Cleveland was trying to trade its play boy. But don't ask Billy Evans to trade him today.

ATHLETICS AIDED BY COLLEGE HEADS

serts, "have become more familiar with the rules, ethics and standards of different sports."

E. C. Lytton, business manager of Drake University, says he feels certain there was an annual improvement in college athletics before the Carnegie report was issued. "Conditions now as compared with ten years ago," he added, "are very favorable indeed."

From Nebraska, Athletic Director Herb D. Gish speaks favorably of the report. He believes officials of all schools keep a closer watch over their athletic departments to prevent subsidizing and recruiting by alumni.

Oklahoma College and University authorities, questioned about the report, said their schools were not affected. St. Louis University's answer was the same.

Schmeling-Stribling Bout Bid Renewed by Chicagoan

"We will renew our $500,000 offer to Schmeling," Strotz said, "and I believe we can sign him up. Furthermore, we are prepared to buy out the Hearst milk fund interest in the show. If we are lucky enough to land the match, the setting will be Soldier Field. I expect the situation will break tomorrow after the meeting of the New York State Athletic Commission."

Strotz figures on charging "common sense" prices for the proposed fight, with a top of $20 or $25. Soldier Field, in which Gene Tunney defended his title against Jack Dempsey in their battle of 1927, will accommodate 140,000 spectators for a boxing show.

Strotz said the match might draw $1,500,000, with the prices he intends to charge. The Tunney-Dempsey match drew a gate of over $2,000,000, with "ringside" seats selling for $40.

TECH AND EASTERN IN TESTS FOR SERIES OPENER

Champs Play Hyattsville Quintet

By BOB CONSIDINE.

TECH and Eastern, prime favorites to finish close to the top in the impending high school series, will take on opponents today in their final tuning up campaign before meeting each other Friday afternoon at Tech in the opening game of the annual series.

Tech will engage Hyattsville High at Tech Gym at 3:45 o'clock and should experience no undue difficulty in turning back the outlying tossers. Hyattsville has lost to Central and to Business, and, while showing improvement in each game, is not expected to make much of a dent in Tech's well-trained style of game.

Great optimism has been exuding from Tech's camp over the fine manner in which Everett Russell has more than upheld his reputation this year. The "Honeyboy" is bigger and stronger than last year and impresses Coach Artie Boyd as possessing a little more finesse than has yet marked his court play. Richardt, forward, and Reed, guard, are two who will be noticed in the series, too. Reichardt, a rookie on the Maroon and Gray squad, has shown great promise this year, at times equaling Russell, his running mate, in speed and basket mongering.

Reed's Height Is Advantage.

Reed, a big fellow, has shown natural ability in taking the ball off the backboard, which should prove all sorts of an advantage Friday, when Eastern's long shots commence to pepper the vicinity of the basket.

Eastern will meet the Boys' Club tonight at 8 o'clock at the Boys' Club in what should be a victory for Coach Guyon's covey of Lincoln Park giants. The game probably will do nothing toward establishing the real status of Eastern. The experts are at a loss to know whether it is the best or the worst of the high school teams.

It is reasonably safe to say that the title will not be won by Central, Business or perhaps Western; it is also comparatively safe to say that Tech stands a good chance of winning. But Eastern is hard to classify. Coach Guyon has corraled a queer group of basket ball players to carry the school's colors this year. Noonan, center, and Lieb, forward, tower in the neighborhood of 6 feet 3. Kane, captain and forward, and Zola, guard, are comparatively small. Shirley, a great utility man, is of a nondescript height.

Long Shots Part Of Attack.

They are a crew of long shooters who have mastered the "potshot" to a point where it is part and parcel of their campaign. Their method of passing is also risky. Under most circumstances they do not catch the ball, but bat it to another man without the formality of dribbling.

Barney Kane remains, as he was last year, one of the fastest men in the high school basket ball uniform, but so far this season has not shown any marked shooting ability.

Eastern, of course, does not depend wholly on long shots and "hot potato" passing. Around Shirley is worked to perfection the venerated pivot play and the team is also well versed in other standard and stereotype plays. But its willingness to take radical chances to score, and the minor caliber of its reserve material, all combine to make Eastern the unknown quantity of the league.

Western and Business also have games scheduled for this afternoon. Western is due to meet the Woodward School five at 3:30 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A.

CENSUS FIVE TO STICK.

Earle Moser and the Census Bureau Enumerators "made up" yesterday and the team announced its intention to go through with the franchise it holds in the Independent Basket Ball League.

To date the Enumerators have won five of their six starts, among their victims being Stewart Bros. Photographers, Typewriter Grays and Hack Wilson's All-Stars.

FOOTBALL HERO TO MARRY

Miss Shirley Immerman, of New York, is the fiancee of Benny Friedman, of Cleveland, former All-American quarter back of Michigan and now captain of the New York Giants Professional Team. Friedman is recognized as football's outstanding thrower of forward passes. He met Miss Immerman in New York last July. They will be married in the spring.

D. C. Amateur Basket Ball League to Add Two Teams

Clover A. C. Considered for Berth; St. Martin's Replaces Russells; Teams to Enter Post's Tourney; Carideo May Attend.

POSSIBILITIES that two more teams would be given franchises in the District of Columbia Basket Ball League was expressed last night by C. W. Fyfe, president of the newly formed amateur basket ball circuit which gets under way January 17 at the Boys' Club. The Clover A. C. and a yet unknown aggregation are the teams which may be added to the original list of six squads.

William E. Russell informed the league yesterday that the team bearing his name would be unable to organize before the start of the season. It was to have comprised a covey of high school amateur players. President Fyfe announced that the St. Martin's Five would substitute for the Russells.

Group of Outstanding Teams in Line.

The new league has followed the lead of the Community Center teams in announcing that it would enter The Washington Post's District championship A. A. U. tournament in a body. Several of the clubs competing played prominent roles in last year's tournament held at Tech High School, the scene of the coming tourney.

The teams thus far entered are Potomac Boat Club, Y. M. C. A., Boys' Club, Mercury A. C., Sak's Clothiers and St. Martin's. Games will be played alternately at the Boys' Club and the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday and Saturday nights.

Joe Robinson, secretary-treasurer of the circuit, and former Catholic University grid performer, will submit the schedule for the season at the meeting of the officials of the institution Friday night. Care has been taken by Mr. Robinson to avoid conflicting dates with the Community Center League. The league will also be completed before the start of The Post's A. A. U. championships.

Carideo May Toss First Ball.

A gala night is promised for the opening of the league on Saturday, January 17. Besides the opening game of the league there is planned a tilt between Emerson Institute and the Boys' Club, to be followed by a dance.

Efforts are being made to have Frank Carideo, Notre Dame's all-American quarter back, toss up the first ball. In the event that Carideo will be unable to be present, one of several Washington baseball players will perform the honors.

Many Sports Teams Now Active at J. C. C.

Under the eye of Jim McNamara, winter sports at the Jewish Community Center go into high gear this week. The annual Intracenter Basket Ball League will soon get under way. Eight senior and five junior squads are tuning up daily pending the start of the loop. McNamara reports that the boxing team is in about its best shape and will tread water until its entrance in the Penn A. C. meet.

An active immediate future is promised for the Center's wrestlers. Coach McNamara has scheduled the Y. M. C. A., the Baltimore Y. M. C. A. and the Richmond Y. M. H. A. The handball players, under the direction of Paul Pearlman, are looking forward to the annual Center championship and several outside matches

Rosalie Dunbar Leads Y. W. C. A. 15-Mile Swim

Rosalie Dunbar, with 8½ miles to her credit, is leading the Y. W. C. A.'s annual 15-mile swim, which is being conducted at both clubhouses. Helen Petrie is second, a mile behind the leader. Others well up in the race are Louise Martin, Martha Mead, Polly Wrightson, Evangeline Rice and Helen Shepard.

Indoor golf is growing in popularity at both clubhouses of the Y. W. C. A. Mel Shorey, Potomac Park pro, is in charge of the proceedings.

COUNTY LEAGUE RESULTS.

The Dor-A and Company F Basket Ball Teams triumphed last night at the Hyattsville Armory in scheduled Prince Georges County League matches. The Dor-A five defeated the Mount Rainiers, 38 to 22, while the Company F crew nosed out the Hyattsville Southern Methodists, 28 to 27.

WEIDMAN'S 645 LEADS TOURNEY

LEADERSHIP in the men's class changed hands last night in the Evening Star bowling tournament when play was resumed after a holiday lay-off on the Coliseum drives, while a tie for first place in the women's class was recorded.

STOCK PRICES LOSE DESPITE 2 RALLIES

Packing Shares Climb After Modification of Consent Decree Is Known.

SPECIALTIES MOVE UP

New York, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Most of the financial markets slipped into reverse gear today. Stocks ran out of fuel for a further climb and settled back, pushed by profit-taking and short selling. Commodities, especially bar silver, also reacted, but bonds, led by the rails, held to the rise.

The stock market's ten-point rally last week suggested that a period of realizing sales was due, and this influence was evident from the opening. Leading shares which had penetrated the highs of the advance that started December 17 were in supply most of the day, although the quiet session saw two rallies—one in the forenoon, when early declines were more than recovered, and the other at the close when short covering pulled the list from the day's lowest levels.

A number of active shares in the industrial and utility sections lost from a fraction to 2 points net. Chemical issues softened, while some of the rails, notably Atchison, Union Pacific and Illinois Central, were heavy. There was group strength in the packing shares after the modification of the consent decree became known, and a few isolated specialties made independent sallies into higher ground, but the average for 90 stocks declined 1½ points. Turnover was 2,087,040 shares.

Bonds Being Watched Closely.

Many observers are paying closer attention to the action of bonds than to the movement of stocks, holding to the theory that a sustained rise in the former securities must precede important progress by shares. Bonds have now been rising since before Christmas and the disappearance of distress and emergency selling has led to hopes that that market will continue to improve.

Week-end advices by statistical organizations cautioned that early upturns in business must be carefully studied, for signs of their real significance; in other words, whether the improvement is seasonal or more fundamental. Nevertheless, it was pointed out, any gains would probably have an important psychological effect on a market hungering for good news.

Although the decision in the packers' case did not give the companies the requested permission to do retail selling, it did allow them to engage in lines unrelated to their own industry and was therefore favorably received by the market. Armour of Illinois preferred soared 5¾ points, Wilson preferred, 2¾; Beechnut, 2, and Cudahy 1. There were smaller advances in other members of the group.

Goodyear Drops 4 Points.

The drop in the rubber shares accompanied a forecast that tire prices were soon to be reduced. Goodyear was soft, losing nearly 4 points before the decline was halted. U. S. Rubber lost a point.

Passage of the so-called credit stringency that accompanies a year-end found call money abundant and unwanted. The stock exchange renewal rate of 1½ per cent was the lowest since September 29, but many lenders were offering funds unofficially at 1 per cent. A few brokers also reduced interest charges on time accommodations.

Final 1930 returns from the two large mail order houses were rather disappointing. Sears-Roebuck's sales for the last period of its thirteen-month calendar were off 22.4 per cent from 1929, against a loss of 20.8 per cent in the previous interval. Montgomery Ward's December gross was 19.9 per cent below that of the same month of 1929, although the November decline had been 24.9 per cent. For the entire year, Sears-Roebuck reported a decrease of 11.4 per cent and Montgomery Ward 6.6. The Woolworth company's business last month was off 4.1 per cent, which was close to the 4.5 per cent decrease for all of 1930.

Corn and Cotton Sink.

July wheat, new contract, had another sinking spell, breaking 2 cents a bushel. Other futures, however, closed steady. Weakness of the Buenos Aires market was a factor. There was also an increase in the visible supply. Corn, meeting larger offerings from Nebraska, lost 1 to 1½ cents. Cotton's recent advances were sharply checked after some further improvement and futures yielded 75 to 90 cents a bale net.

The weakness of bar silver, which touched a record low, influenced the foreign exchanges and rates were mostly lower, with sterling cables sagging 1⅛ to $4.85⅛.

Final prices on the stock exchange represented fair recoveries from the lows. United States Steel, which had been 2 points off, reduced its loss to ⅞, and there were net declines of about a point in American Can, American Telephone, North American, Westinghouse, General Motors, General Electric, Kennecott, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Union Carbide. Allied Chemical got back 2 points of a 4½ point drop. American Tobacco, Lambert, Johns-Manville, Paramount, National Lead and a few others rose about 1½ to 4½ net.

EVERY BOND GROUP JOINS RISING TREND

CALL MONEY RATE SINKS

While the main body of domestic issues moved forward in orderly fashion, it was the spectacular comeback made by many obligations that have been neglected by buyers for a long time that was the feature of the day's trading.

Call money renewed at 1½ per cent, bringing the rate down to a level unprecedented since 1915, with the exception of September 29. The accumulating assurances that the extreme ease in the money market will be marked for some time tend to divert additional funds into fixed income securities.

Changes in Utilities.

Utilities were buoyed by a strong demand that extended to a wide field of prime and second grade issues. American Telephone debenture 5½s advanced a point to within shooting distance of its 1930 high. International Telephone issues were uniformly higher. The debenture 5s and convertible 4½s rallied more than 3 points, and the debenture 4½s gained 2¼. Louisville Gas & Electric 5s, North American Edison 5s C, and Postal Telegraph 5s were others that stood out.

Some of the changes in the rail group read like a movement in shares. Ulster & Delaware bonds, infrequently traded, advanced 5 to 10 points. Seaboard Air Line 4s of 1950 gained 10. Oregon, St. Louis Southwestern 5s, Illinois Central 4s, St. Paul 4½s E, and Cuban 5s rallied 2 to 4. International Great Northern issues climbed 5 to 8.

Industrials Rally Sharply.

Many industrials recovered sharply from the five-year low level reached in the 1930 decline. Armour & Co. 1½s rose 6 and bidding was brisk for such issues as Consolidated Coal of Maryland 5s, Chile Copper 5s, Detroit River Tunnel 4½s, Goodrich 6s, Dorillard 5½s, Newberry Co. 5½s advanced 8. The 8s of the Fisk Rubber Co., which was placed in receivership Saturday, closed 4¾ higher.

Bonds carrying stock privilege features reached new highs for the current advance. Advances ranged as high as 10 points. New Haven convertible 5s gained 5, Remington Rand 1½s, 6¾, and Pathe 7s, 4¾.

United States Governments held firm. Most of the foreign bonds joined the upward trend of the domestic section. Turnover in some of the government and municipal issues profited from the best demand in many weeks.

New financing soon to appear includes a $3,000,000 issue of Illinois Public Service Co. first 5s, due November 1, 1968.

DISTRICT BANKERS PLAN NEW COURSE

LECTURERS ARE LISTED

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

A course in real estate, indicated last fall as a possible addition to the curriculum of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, is now a reality, according to announcement yesterday by Aubrey O. Dooley, chairman of the chapter's educational committee.

In commenting on this special course for the spring term, Mr. Dooley said that the educational committee felt real estate was one of the most important subjects with which certain branches of the banking business had to deal, and his committee felt it was advisable to make available to bank officers and senior clerks the benefits of this informal real estate course.

To Stress Technical Phases.

In arranging and determining the character of the course, the committee had in mind primarily a study of the more technical phases of real estate and real estate practices from a banking angle, rather than a study of real estate as a business. Thus, the course outlined deals with the fundamentals of real estate ownership, occupancy, conveyancing, appraising and financing, together with related subjects such as zoning, city planning, taxation and building.

This course will consist of a series of twelve lectures, beginning Monday, January 26, and continuing on succeeding Monday evenings, with an informal discussion following each lecture. The first lecture introducing the real estate business in its relation to the banker will be given by John A. Petty, executive secretary of the Washington Real Estate Board, who will conduct the class throughout the course.

Various Lectures Announced.

The remaining topics to be discussed during the course, as well as the various lecturers are: Estates in Real Estate, by Roger J. Whiteford, attorney; Real Estate Conveyancing, by James J. Becker, president of the Real Estate and Columbia Title Insurance Co.; Title and Title Examinations, by A. G. Bishop, president of the District-Washington-Lawyers Title Insurance Co.; Landlord and Tenant Relations, by G. Percy McGlue, attorney; Taxation, by William P. Richards, assessor for the District of Columbia; Property Management, by J. F. M. Bowie, vice president of H. L. Rust Co.; Evolution of Home Building, by Waverly Taylor, realtor-builder; Real Estate Financing, by William J. Flather, jr., of Glover & Flather; Real Estate Appraising, by H. L. Rust, jr., chairman of the appraisal committee Washington Real Estate Board; Contracts and Settlements, by James P. Schick, president of the National Mortgage & Investment Corporation, and Zoning and City Planning, by C. W. Elliot 2d, director of planning National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

All directors of the Firemen's Insurance Co. of Washington and Georgetown were reelected at the annual meeting of stockholders yesterday. They are Edward C. Baltz, Bruce E. Clark, Millard T. Dixon, Parke A. Galleher, William M. Hoffman, J. Logan Hopkins, Albert W. Howard, Charles H. Kindle, John H. Snyder, Schuyler S. Symons, Floyd P. Waggaman, Albert W. Walker and James M. Woodward. The meeting of organization will be held today.

Man Awarded Job Through Headache

Migraine Will Be Studied for Three Month by Illinois University.

Chicago, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Theodore Roberts, 23, of Lake Geneva, Wis., was adjudged possessor of the best headache among 750 entrants today and was duly installed as a laboratory subject of the University of Illinois' College of Medicine.

In return for the choicest board and room in its hospital laboratory and $50 per month, Mr. Roberts promised to produce a first-class migraine headache fortnightly for three months. There will be Sundays off, pain or no pain, and the chance to contribute toward a scientific solution of migraine, one of humanity's baffling ailments.

Mr. Roberts has had twelve years' experience in headaches and was quite willing to have the medical college study him.

WOMEN ASK HOOVER FOR EQUAL RIGHTS IN EMPLOYMENT CRISIS

A dinner at the Washington Hotel last night, and a visit yesterday afternoon to the White House, by a deputation, to protest discrimination against women workers during the unemployment crisis, closed two days of activity for the National Woman's Party, in connection with the dedication of the Alva Belmont House, new national headquarters.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the party, presided at the dinner and introduced the speakers, including two members of Congress and several leaders and officers in the party's ranks.

Protest Limitations.

Among the speakers were Mrs. Alma Partridge, of the Women's Bar Association, who spoke on equal rights in the legal profession; Miss Laura Berrien, of Georgia, who told of attempts to put women out of work during the period of stress in the employment situation; Representative Kendall, of Pennsylvania; Representative Fitzgerald, of Ohio; Rebecca Greathouse, assistant District prosecuting attorney, and Miss Anita Pollitzer, of New York, national vice chairman of the party.

Mrs. Leonora Speyer, winner of a Pulitzer prize for poetry, presented a group of poems.

During the visit to the White House yesterday Mrs. Wiley presented to President Hoover resolutions affirming that at this time of unemployment no woman shall be required to give up her job to a man; that their opportunities should not be limited by dismissing them from night work; that such limitation implies assumption of the inferiority of women to men, a doctrine women resent; that any attempt to carry out a plan of dismissal of women will be opposed by the National Women's Party; that the present treatment of employed women necessitates the immediate passage of the equal rights amendment.

Promise Is Recalled.

Then Mrs. Maude Williams, of the Typographical Union, No. 6, told the President of handicaps she said were imposed on women who are legislated out of work.

Burnita Shelton Matthews, of Mississippi, protested to Mr. Hoover on losses caused in the ranks of employed women through legislation.

Miss Pollitzer presented the last message to the President, reminding him of a promise made in the fall of 1928 before his election. At that time, she told the President, "You said that, although you had not thoroughly investigated the subject, you were willing to say that you would go to any extent to remove restrictions on equality of opportunity."

To Meet Senate Body.

Others in the delegation calling on the President were Mrs. Valentine Winters, of Ohio; Mrs. Rose Stetson, of Seattle; Mrs. Lucy Cooper Shaw, of Minnesota; Miss Sara P. Grogan, of Georgia; Mrs. Anna Jackson Sloan, of Virginia; Mrs. George W. McCreary, of Maryland; Miss Helen McGerr, of Nebraska; Miss Maude Younger, of California, and Miss Muna Lee, of Porto Rico.

The necessity for doing away with all legal discrimination against women will be argued before the Senate judiciary committee, when the hearing on the Lucretia Mott amendment is brought up at a hearing at 10 o'clock today.

Miss Younger, Miss Matthews, vice president of the National Association of Women Lawyers; Miss Williams, Mrs. Lieber Whittie, New York State chairman, and Miss Pollitzer will present the political, economic and industrial phases of the equal rights question from the party's standpoint.

RESIDENTS OPPOSE RECREATION CENTER ON RESERVOIR SITE

Snyder Tells 16th Street Citizens Playing Children Would Be Nuisance.

ASSOCIATION SEEKING NEW TRAFFIC LIGHT

Emphatic opposition to the proposal of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to convert the Sixteenth street reservoir site into a recreation center, when the reservoir is abandoned, was voiced by United States Marshal Edgar C. Snyder at a meeting of the Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association last night because "having a lot of children playing in the center of the Sixteenth street residential section would be a nuisance."

Mr. Snyder added that the children of this residential section have sufficient playing facilities in their own back yards and in school playgrounds. "There is no need to bring hundreds of children together in play on the reservoir site," he said. Instead of a recreation center, Mr. Snyder suggested that the site be converted into a sunken garden or some other form of beautification.

Motion Opposes Plan.

The marshal's sentiments won the support of other members of the association and a motion was apopted opposing the recreation plan. The park and planning commission had written the association, asking it to unite with the Brightwod and Piney Branch Citizens Associations in selecting a name for the site as a recreation center. Appointment of a joint committee for the purpose was suggested and the name "Brightwood Recreation Center" was proposed. This request led to the opposition by the association.

At the suggestion of Mr. Snyder, the president of the association, Dr. Louis J. Battle, appointed a committee of five to cooperate with the George Washington Bicentennial Commission. Mr. Snyder added the suggestion that the committee push the plan to convert the reservoir site into a sunken garden or some other beautification scheme so that it would be ready in time for the bicentennial.

Traffic Lights Sought.

Dr. Battle appointed the following on the committee: Mr. Snyder, Dr. Charles H. Butler, Dr. John P. Turner, W. E. Stoutamyer and Dr. E. R. Ballinger.

On the motion of Dr. M. F. Thompson, the association voted to ask for traffic lights, or some other form of traffic protection, at Sixteenth and Kennedy streets northwest. Four streets meet at the intersection. Dr. Thompson predicted that "the corner will produce as many deaths as any epidemic" if left unprotected. Other members said that to cross Sixteenth street at this point was to risk one's life. The meeting was held at the Sixth Presbyterian Church.

CHURCH ROBBERIES LEAD BIG NUMBER OF THEFTS IN CITY

Police and detectives were working yesterday and last night attempting to unravel several cases of larceny and housebreaking, an unusual number of which were reported within the last 24 hours.

Within the last 48 hours two of the leading churches of the city have been ransacked, and money from a safe and a mite box for the poor has been taken. One man was attacked by a robber when he was found in the home, while several other attempts were frustrated when the robbers were scared away.

The largest reported robbery was that which took place at the newly finished National City Christian Church, at Fourteenth street and Thomas Circle, when the safe was smashed and more than $200 in cash and checks totaling $500 were taken. The robbery, police say, took place Sunday night.

Janitor Discovers Robbery.

The robbery was discovered when the janitor, Ernest Knausman, opened the office. The safe had been burst by a sledge hammer, which was left on the scene, and the robbers carefully mopped the safe when they had finished to obliterate any possible fingerprints which might have been left. Knausman, when he discovered the robbery, immediately notified police of the Second Precinct and the church officers, who came to the structure at once.

Entry, police say, had been made by a side window. An order was sent out for all policemen to inquire at hardware stores for the possible purchasers of the 12-pound hammer that was used, as well as a screwdriver, file and a pair of pliers which, police say, were found near the safe, and which were all new. Nothing which would lead police to a possible arrest had been found last night.

A unusual case was reported by Morris Wolfson, of 478 M street southwest. He said that he was awakened early yesterday morning when a man entered his room, ostensibly to rob it, and that when the would-be robber saw that he was being watched by Wolfson from his bed he pounced on him and attempted to choke him.

Wolfson told police that he struggled with the man and called for help when he pulled the robber's hands from his throat. He was frightened off and ran out of the house through a rear door. Wolfson told police that he was unable to see the robber well enough to give a description or to identify him, and police were confessedly at a loss as to how to look for the intruder.

Would-Be Robbery Halted.

Margaret White, of 2012 Thirteenth street northwest, yesterday told police that earlier in the morning her door bell rang, and that she was a few minutes in answering it. When she went to the door she found a Negro boy about 16 years old attempting to jimmy the door, thinking no one was at home after the door was not answered promptly. She frightened him away when she appeared.

A truck loaded with clothing belonging to the Globe Dry Cleaning Co., 923 Florida avenue northwest, was taken from a parking place yesterday afternoon, while the driver, Charles J. Ray, of 567 Twenty-fourth street northeast, was delivering clothing.

Ray told police that the clothing which was taken totaled at least $300, although the company had not made a complete check-up and estimate last night.

Other articles which were reported to police as being taken last night and yesterday included "Jiggs," a brown bulldog owned by Walter H. Harper, of 218 C street northwest, who reported the theft to Sixth Precinct police; a pocketbook containing $57, which was reported stolen from Miss Dorothy Foley in the Earle Theater Building, and a $35 watch which was reported taken from Anna Kennedy, of 1733 P street northwest, who reported to Second Precinct police.

MAN KILLED BY AUTO VAGUELY IDENTIFIED

DIPLOMAT - DRIVER FREE

Although partially identified, the man killed at Dupont circle Sunday night by the car of Don Jose Ricardo Gomez Acebo, First Secretary of the Spanish Legation, remains much of a mystery to police.

He appears to be an eccentric figure, little known. An official at the National Savings & Trust Co. viewed the body at the morgue yesterday afternoon and said it was that of a Joseph W. Farrar. The banker told police that the man received his mail at the bank and that he gave no address.

The banker also told police that the man had a wife and two sons who live on California street near Connecticut avenue northwest. Persons at that address told police they knew the man but denied relationship. They said that relatives in the South would care for his burial, and stated that Mr. Farrar was "very eccentric."

No Relatives Heard From.

The Morgue master said late last night that no relatives had communicated with him to make arrangements for the disposition of the body.

The bank official told police that Farrar owned several home properties from which he collected rents.

On a rent receipt book found on his person there were two names—one, J. W. Farrar, and the other James M. Johnston, and the address, Chevy Chase, Md. The postmaster there told police the man Farrar had lived in Chevy Chase fifteen years ago and gave them the name of the bank through which the identification was made.

Farrar died in Emergency Hospital early Monday, where he had been taken after the accident. Gomez Acebo helped place him in a taxi. After a brake test given his car at the Third Precinct Station, the diplomat was released.

Inquest Is Postponed.

A witness, Oliver Rickelson, of Decatur place near Twenty-first street northwest, told police Farrar crossed the street on the green light when struck. Pedestrians are supposed to cross on the red light at circles.

The coroner's inquest, to have been held yesterday, was postponed until today, as the man had not been identified until late yesterday afternoon. Gomez Acebo will be summoned to the inquest, police say.

Meanwhile police are trying to discover more about the man; where he lived, what he did and why his affairs were so secretive.

Who Was This Man?

Who was Joseph W. Farrar, the man killed Sunday night by an automobile at Dupont Circle?

What did he do? Where did he live? Who were his friends and his relatives? Why were the affairs of his life so mysterious and secretive?

Police are attempting to answer these questions. They describe the man as being about 60 years old. He was about 6 feet tall and had sandy gray hair. They say his features were sharp and angular. He was well dressed.

At a late hour last night no one had communicated with the morgue to effect the disposition of his body.

CANAL GIVES UP BODY OF MISSING WOMAN

Police Believe That Kathleen Baxley Killed Herself by Drowning.

HAD BEEN IN HOSPITAL

The disappearance of Kathleen Baxley from her home on Connecticut avenue near S street northwest on November 30 was solved yesterday when a woman's body found in the C. & O. canal below Key Bridge was identified by policewomen as that of the missing woman.

Police believe she committed suicide by throwing herself into the waters of the canal. She was reported missing by Mrs. J. C. Arrington, with whom she lived. Mrs. Arrington told police that the woman had threatened suicide several times and that she had been a mental patient at Gallinger Hospital.

The body was found yesterday morning by Ray Stephenson, of Eleventh street near G street southeast, an employe of the D. C. Paper Co. It was lying against the grating of the inlet to the turbine of the Crystal Ice Co.'s plant. Mr. Stephenson notified James G. Norvell, chief engineer of the ice company's plant, who called police.

Examination of the body at the morgue showed no signs of violence, and Coroner J. Ramsey Nevitt expressed the opinion that death was caused by drowning.

Police from the Woman's Bureau said that Miss Baxley was an orphan from Richmond, Va. She worked at the Evangeline Hotel and lived with Mrs. Arrington, who had taken an interest in her.

The inquest will be held at the morgue this morning.

HARLAND IS SCORED BY CITIZENS' GROUP

Traffic Director Charged With "Discriminating," on Speed Limit.

SCHOOL SYSTEM IS HIT

Director of Traffic W. H. Harland was charged with "unfair discrimination" by the Forest Hills Citizens Association at a meeting last night, for increasing the speed limit along one small section of Connecticut avenue in which the Murch School is situated.

The association also condemned "the whole system of selecting school sites and the system in which school construction has been handled."

Mr. Harland was made the center of an attack because he lifted the speed limit to 30 miles an hour, from 22 miles an hour, on Connecticut avenue between Van Ness street and Ellicott street northwest.

The association voted to request that the limit be made to conform with the rest of Connecticut avenue. Only .7 miles is affected by the 30-mile limit, it yas pointed out.

One criticism leveled at the school system was over the selection of a site on Garrison street near Wisconsin avenue for a new elementary school designed to relieve congestion at the E. V. Brown School. Reducing enrollment at the Brown School can not be carried out by building a school at the selected site, the association held, and recommended that the school be built on Western avenue.

The association also complained that no street will run in front of the new Alice Deal Junior High School. A committee was appointed to see what could be done to remedy this situation.

The association decided to send a letter of complaint to Col. U. S. Grant, director of public buildings and grounds, on the garbage dump at the southeast corner of Connecticut avenue and Albermarle street.

Tug Worker Taken to Hospital.

When he became seriously ill while working on the tug L. C. Worrell at Clarke's Wharf, Tenth and Water streets southwest, George Toyer, 61 years old, yesterday was removed to Gallinger Hospital in an ambulance called to the wharf by police. Hospital authorities said last night that the man was suffering from double pneumonia.

CITIZENS' BODY ASKS CONTROL OVER SIGNS

COMMUNITY CHEST TALK

Efforts of the District Commissioners to control advertising signs in Washington were indorsed by the Dupont Circle Citizens Association yesterday afternoon, at a meeting held at the Mayflower Hotel.

The association also heard a plea for support of the Community Chest, and voted to send a representative to a hearing on the Borland law, scheduled by the House District committee for today. Several were admitted to membership by the association.

"This citizens' association indorses the efforts of the District Commissioners to have Congress pass a law to have control, under regulations established by them, to limit and control all signs displayed to the public," the resolution on advertising read. It was adopted unanimously.

William Knowles Cooper, speaking for the Community Chest, told the citizens that the Chest faced a deficit of about $20,000 at the first of this year, as compared with a $100,000 surplus at the beginning of 1930.

Dr. George E. McLean, Mrs. H. B. Mirick, William McKee Dunn, William Franklin Sands and Grover W. Ayers were accepted as members.

New members of committees elected were Harral Mullikin, utilities; T. H. B. McKnight, legislative, and Frank C. Baldwin, housing.

MANOR PARK SCORES SCHOOL AUTHORITIES

Citizens' Body Says Needs of Community Have Been 'Overlooked.'

INCREASED FUND ASKED

School needs of the Manor Park section have been "consistently overlooked" by public school authorities, H. S. Bryant, chairman of the schools committee of the Manor Park Citizens Association, told the group at a meeting last night in the Whittier School.

Pointing out that the budget, as submitted by the Board of Education, provides only ten rooms and a gymnasium as an addition to the Paul Junior High School, Mr. Bryant advised the association to "go directly to Congress" for sufficient funds to complete the school. Ten more rooms and another gymnasium are called for, he said.

Ernest Pullman, W. H. Seaquist and John D. Smoot agreed with Mr. Bryant that the association had "nothing to lose and everything to gain" in asking Congress for funds in excess of the board's estimates. Mr. Pullman said $40,000 would be saved by completing the building now.

The association was successful last year in obtaining funds for an addition to the Whittier School, bids for which were to be opened today at the District Building.

The legislative committee of the association was directed to attend today's Senate District committee hearings on modification of the Borland law. The group has gone on record as favoring repeal of the measure.

Larceny Charged In Collection Row

Falke is alleged to have taken an automobile and a trunk containing 100 fountain pens belonging to John Kovsky, of 3527 Center street northwest, in payment for tires which the latter had purchased on the deferred payment plan from the Bailey Tire Store. Kovsky was behind with his payments at the time, it is alleged.

Kovsky, according to police reports, reported his automobile missing. Falke, when it was discovered he had the machine, returned it but not the pens, the records show.

Marriage Annulment Asked on Fraud Claim

Request that his marriage to Ethel B. Heeter, of N street northwest, near Fourteenth street, be annuled on the grounds of fraud was made in a petition filed yesterday in District Supreme Court by Guy Raymond Heeter, a minor, of E street southwest, near Sixth street.

Heeter, through Attorneys Daniel S. Ring and Harvey L. Cobb, alleges that he married the woman February 2, 1930, at Alexandria, Va. He acted, he says, on the woman's representations that she was divorced and that her child was the offspring of that union. Last December he learned that his wife had never been married before, Heeter states.

Father McGowan Makes Address Before K. of C.

The Rev. Raymond A. McGowan, assistant director of the social action department of the National Welfare Association, was the principal speaker last night at a meeting of the Washington General Assembly of Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, held at the Mayflower Hotel. His address dealt with unemployment and Catholic social teachings.

James B. Flynn, chairman of the patrons committee of the assembly, told of plans for an initiation ceremony which will be held on Washington's birthday, stating that over 100 will be in the initiatory class, including several persons from Baltimore and Annapolis. A buffet supper was served following the meeting.

Merger of Towns Fails at Meeting

Montgomery County Men Vote Down Proposal; Will Be Studied.

Disapproval of the proposal to merge the municipalities between Wisconsin avenue and the Potomac River in suburban Montgomery County was voiced at a mass meeting last night in the Glen Echo-Cabin John High School.

Representatives of the towns of Glen Echo, Glen Echo Heights, Mohican Hills, Brookmont, and Cabin John Park voted down the project, which would have made the entire area a part of the Bethesda tax area. The proposed plan provided for control of the Bethesda Fire Board and the erection of a firehouse on Conduit road.

Following a heated discussion, O. M. Kile, who acted as chairman, appointed the following committee to make a further study and to report back at another meeting to be held in the future: C. A. Korbly, of Mohican Hills; L. H. Odell, of Brookmont; B. B. Vaden, of Glen Echo Heights; A. A. Potter, of Cabin John Park, and H. G. McCuen, of Glen Echo.

Drunkenness Laid to 29 In 112 Park Arrests

The United States Park Police made 112 arrests last month, of which 29 were for drunkenness, according to the report yesterday of Capt. P. J. Carroll to Capt. R. C. Montgomery, superintendent. The offense for which the most arrests were made, however, was traffic violations, there being 48.

One arrest for transportation of liquor was made. Thirty-five of those arrested were fined $592, while 51 forfeited $256 in collateral. Two offenders were jailed for 30 days each, one was sentenced to 15 months, while a third was fined $100 and sent to jail for 30 days. One lost child was returned to its parents.

Contractor Asks Bankruptcy.

Charles S. Bell, general contractor, of 3909 Huntington street northwest, filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy yesterday in District Supreme Court. Liabilities totaling $33,523.75 and assets of $30,300 are designated. Attorney Lewis S. Barnes appears for the alleged bankrupt.

BIG BILL GOES HOLLYWOOD.

THINGS are reaching a point where there will be two types of athletes. Those that are ordinary players and those that are in the moving pictures.

• • • •

Hollywood, after snaring Bobby Jones, the greatest golfer of them all, has now reached out and thrown a net over Big Bill Tilden, the stormy petrel of tennis.

• • • •

Big Bill made public his decision to abandon grass, sand and concrete courts for an all-celluloid game in a letter to the United States Lawn Tennis Association, announcing his retirement as an amateur, and not even wishing the association a Happy New Year.

• • • •

By this decision he is abandoning the net for the gross.

• • • •

Two of our most noted athletes have capitulated within the past ten weeks to the vested interests. Money isn't everything, but, on the other hand, a loud cheer never bought a biscuit.

• • • •

There comes to every great athlete a time when he realizes none of our most successful Americans ever left estates consisting exclusively of funny looking loving cups.

• • • •

And when he succumbs to the conviction that glory is just another frozen asset.

• • • •

The kiddies can't be fed on yellow clippings and no woman is going to get a kick out of the realization in after years that while her husband hasn't been able to put aside anything for their old age his amateur standing has been kept intact.

• • • •

THE amateur athletic associations lean so far backward in their interpretation of what constitutes a genuine 100 per cent amateur that when in executive session they look like a troupe of contortionists.

• • • •

A professional, as they define him, is an athlete who receives money from any source other than an uncle's will, the discovery of oil on his grandfather's Oklahoma homestead or the hocking of his watch and fraternity fob.

• • • •

Nothing that Jones or Tilden will do in the moving pictures will in any way change their sportsmanship, their character (we hope), their form or their standards, but they become professionals by mere contact with Klieg lights and visible means of support.

• • • •

These two great stars will simply show the American public how to better its game. "And anybody who can do that should be regarded as a benefactor of humanity and a dissipater of human suffering.

WHAT INDEED?

HE had fallen asleep in one of those arty movie houses. The feature picture was one of those pretty impossible English productions. Presently an usher shook him and barked, "Cut it out. You've been snoring."

Community Chest Plea Made to Citizens Group

A plea to support the approaching Community Chest drive was laid before the Congress Heights Citizens Association last night at its meeting in Congress Heights School. The speaker who urged that members contribute and back the campaign in every way possible was Mrs. Elwood Street, wife of the chest director.

Resolutions were adopted condemning the use of billboards and asking that the public comfort station at Fifteenth and H streets be removed. Following the business meeting, the group was entertained by Tim Mullens, impersonator.

Citizens Indorse Billboard Attack

Cathedral Heights - Cleveland Park Group Also Aids Pay Drive.

A resolution indorsing campaigns which are seeking to have billboards in and near Washington abolished was adopted at a meeting of the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association, held last night in St. Alban's Parish Hall, Wisconsin avenue and Massachusetts avenue northwest.

The members also adopted resolutions indorsing the action of other associations in the city which have urged authorities to work for more pay for the employes of the District Jail, and also urged the Commissioners to put on more employes at the institution, pointing out that there were not enough men employed to adequately do the work.

It was decided to ask the Commissioners to place two additional street car loading platforms on Wisconsin avenue, pointing out that the platforms were badly needed at Macomb street and at Woodley road. Lyles Burrough, assistant director of the Community Chest, explained the work of the chest.

Overzealous Truck Driver Almost Wrecks Wedding

A suspicious driver of a sausage delivery truck nearly disrupted plans for a wedding scheduled to be held last night. He thought a friend of the prospective bridegroom looked like the man he saw hold up a store several months ago. The matter was ironed out at the Seventh Precinct Station, where the wedding party was taken, and presumably the ceremony went through on schedule.

The principal roles in this comedy of errors were played by F. Emerson, the truck driver; Eugene William, 21, the prospective bridegroom; Leslie Walker, 32, who was mistaken for the holdup man and a colored preacher, whose name was not obtained. Williams and Walker are Negroes. The former is from Latteburg, Va., and Walker lives at 816 Thirteenth street northeast.

Walker, who had been driving with his friends, stopped at a grocery at Twenty-ninth and O streets northwest to get change for a dollar. Emerson, making a delivery there, noticed Walker and decided he was the man who held up a store on G street southwest under similar circumstances.

The driver immediately went to the Seventh Precinct station, brought Policeman Morgan back to the store and, with the assistance of a woman who had noted the license number of the Negroes' car, trailed them to a gas station at Twenty-seventh and Q streets.

Williams was released, free to continue towarc the altar, as was the preacher and Henry A. Adams, of Avalon, Va., who was in the party. Walker, however, was returned to the police station. But the G street merchant, who meanwhile had been summoned, could not identify the suspect as his assailant.
